CO-OPERATION OF NEWSPAPERS ASKED BY U. S. EXECUTIVE

Diligent Watch Over Persons Seeking To Influence Government Action, With View To Unmasking Special Interests' Representatives, Recommended In Address Dedicating National Press Club's New Quarters.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.) —In an address formally dedicating the new quarters of the National Press club, atop the clubs new $11,000,000 office building, President Coolidge placed the press of America under the microscope tonight, found it wanting in many respects, and prescribed an "editorial policy" of his own, which he believes would produce the perfect newspaper.

The president spoke, he said, "as a contributing editor" who had written few stories, but who had "some success in the making of news." The Coolidge journal, as outlined to the newspaper correspondents of the national capital, called for:

1. More emphasis on virtue and success, and less on vice, delinquency and failure.

2. Frank admission by newspapers of possible foreign connections before they undertake to influence the government's foreign policy.

"Diligent watch over those seeking to influence governmental action, with a view to unmasking lobbyists and representative of special interests."

4. Fullest publicity for all official government acts, but without espionage over the private lives and personal actions of government officials.

5. A greater and more constant appeal to patriotism and national pride.

Sees a Loss of Power.

Offering these suggestions, Mr. Coolidge expressed the opinion that,

POLICY OF U. S. SCORED BLUNTLY

Monroe Doctrine Attacked by Some Delegates at Havana.

U. S. Delegation Left Almost Alone as Debate Goes Too Far.

HAVANA, Feb. 4—(U. P.)—A smouldering under current of Latin-American resentment against United States policy in South America burst into flame at the Pan-American conference today and left the United States delegation standing almost alone in a fight for things as they are.

Victor Mauretua, Peruvian secretary of the international law committee submitted a report that, while it recognized the right of soverignty of all nations, reminded of the fact that rights entailed obligations.

Delegates from most of the twenty-one natons represented at the conference had ideas on the subject. Everyone knew what they were —that intervention by the United

USE TEAR BOMBS TO SUBDUE BEAR IN CHICAGO ZOO

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—

"Bill" went on a rampage today.

Yep, he refused food, fought his keeper and created a rio'. And for the first time in the history of Chicago, and perhaps other places, police employed tear bombs to subdue a bear in the Lincoln park zoo.

Bill got loose somehow and decided his keeper was a choicer morsel than the horse meat or whatever they feed bears. Anyway, Bill was subdued after a police squad tossed a tear bomb under his nose.

Bill broke right down and cried and obediently went back into his cage, although bearly able to crawl there.

YOUNG AIRMAN DOES 515 LOOPS FOR A RECORD

Minnesota Law Student, 22, Betters Mark For Somersaults.

REMAINS IN AIR OVER FOUR HOURS

"Gosh, It Was Cold," He Remarks On Landing —No Ill Effects.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 4—(U.P.) —Gene Shank, 22-year-old law student, today looped the loop in an airplane 515 consecutive times. He broke all known existing records for the feat.

The highest known previous record was 315 aerial somersaults, set in France by Belvin W. Maynard.

Shank was in the air four hours and twenty-six minutes. He tied Maynard's record three hours after taking off at the local airport, and continued to fly until his gasoline supply was exhausted. Shank brought his plane to the ground in "dead stick" fashion.

His chapped lips were bleeding and his face was numb from cold.

The aviator was composed when he alighted from the plane and walked to an automobile, which rushed out to meet him. He suffered no ill effects, despite the fact he turned completely over once every two minutes for four hours and eighteen minutes.

Shank flew a Waco ten, commercial plane. It carried forty gallons of gasoline and four gallons of oil. The pilot carried a parachute.

"I can't believe it," the youth declared when told he had turned the airplane over 515 times.

Didn't Keep a Count.

"I thought it was about 300 times, but I didn't try to keep a count.

"Gosh, it was cold," he added.

During the time each loop made greater the name of his son, John

BOWLING ALLEY SAFE IS ROBBED

Between $65 and $70 Taken While Crowd Is In Saratoga.

Between $65 and $70 in cash was stolen from the safe in the Saratoga Bowling alley, 1117 P street, between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday night. The robbery occurred while Jack Duncan, 1253 South Twenty-first street, in charge, was busy on the floor and away from his counter which is in front of the safe. There was such a crowd milling in and out of the place that Duncan has no idea as to the identity of the thief, he told police.

The money was in a small strong box in the open safe. The robber took the box from the safe into a small room just off of the bowling alley where he cleaned it of all silver nd currency but left several dollars in checks and a gold watch.

Duncan noticed that the box was missing about 10 o'clock and summoned police at once. Upon investigation they found that the thief after taking the money, had to leave the ante-room through the door beside the office counter, and also had to go through the large crowd with his loot before getting to the street.

Lieutenant Rymer and Officers Zehrun and Goodwin were called.

Germany's Greatest Man Hunt at An End

BERLIN, Feb. 4—(INS)— The career of Johann Anton Hein, Germany's killer of policemen, ended today. He was captured at Wuerttemberg by a posse of 5,000 police, soldiers and citizens.

During his flight, Hein killed every policeman who approached him. He had killed three when captured.

BOURNE IS TAKEN BACK FOR RETRIAL

Man Who Won Reversal in Westervelt Killing to Again Face Jury at Rushville.

Sheriff R. M. Bruce of Rushville was in Lincoln Saturday to return Wayne Bourne for his second trial on the charge of slaying Ferris Westervelt. Last April Bourne was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to thirty years in the penitentiary. On a showing that the state failed to establish a motive for the killing, the Supreme court reversed the sentence and remanded the case for retrial. The alleged crime, at first considered an accident, was committed October 8, 1925. The two men had been good friends.

FLOOD CONTROL PLAN OUTLINED

Mickey Recommends Five Protective Measures to Solons.

Favors Appointment of Agency to Study Entire Situation.

Immediate provisions should be made to protect life and property on main tributaries of the Mississippi as well as on the river itself, is the conclusion reached by Prof. Clark E. Mickey of the University of Nebraska in a report just submitted to Frank R. Reid, chairman of the house committee on flood control. Professor Mickey is technical advisor to the committee.

The Missouri river and its special problems are treated by Professor Mickey in his report.

Construction of reservoirs, levees or spillways, or a combination of these features, are suggested by him as possible solutions of the problem. A competent agency, he believes, should be provided by the United States government with power to make complete studies of all flood and drouth control problems and economic uses of the Mississippi and its tributaries. Funds should then be provided for carrying out the commission's ideas.

Many Problems Involved.

Such a plan would include, he believes, forestation, recreation parks, protection and promotion of wild life, headwater storage, for irrigation and other purposes, stream storage for power, water supply, reduction of silt, channel improvement, levees, controlled spillways, and the like.

"This plan must of necessity consider the general welfare, the commerce and the defense of the nation," he concludes.

After presenting several sets of figures, Professor Mickey finds that they:

"Prove beyond question of doubt two facts, namely, that the soils in the Missouri river drainage basin are the greatest soil storage reservoirs as well as the greatest river control soils contained in the

START MOVE FOR ABOLITION SUBMARINES

Determined Congressional Drive to Do Away With Undersea Craft.

KELLOGG GIVES HIS APPROVAL

Hoped to Make Outlawry Big Question Before 1931 Arms Conference.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.) A determined congressional movement to bring about the world abolition of submarines in naval warfare was started today with the full sanction of the state department.

The campaign, designed in its initial stages to place the American congress on record in opposition to submarines, is expected to reach into every future conference for the limitation of naval armaments.

Representative Frothingham, republican of Massachusetts, who inaugurated the plan, disclosed that it is the beginning of an effort to make outlawry of the submarine one of the big questions before the 1931 renewal of the Washington arms conference.

As the house foreign affairs committee began deliberation on a resolution by Frothingham to place congress on record against use of submarines, Secretary Kellogg announced his complete sympathy with the proposal.

Kellogg Writes to Porter.

"There is no objection to the Frothingham resolution, provided it expresses the opinion of congress that submarines be abolished and their construction prohibited by all the nations of the world," Kellogg wrote Representative Porter, republican of Pennsylvania, chairman of the foreign affairs committee.

"Of course, it would be impossible for one country to abolish submarines and leave any other country free to operate and build them. The

Statue of Liberty Will Receive First Bath at Early Date

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.) —The Statue of Liberty is to be given a bath—the first since its unveiling in September, 1886.

United States army officials are making the arrangements. A special preparation, known as beads of soap, which creates Niagara-like super-suds instantly on contact with water, will be used to give Dame Liberty her initial bath.

The beads of soap will be blown against the statue. At the same time jets of water will be propelled from nozzles under high pressure. The statue will be enveloped in clouds of suds, which will then be driven off, leaving the bronze monument, which is the national symbol of welcome to incoming visitors, once more immaculate.

ALIENISTS FOR STATE DECLARE HICKMAN SANE

Strike Telling Blows at Insanity Defense of Kidnaper.

Remain Unshaken in Claim Throughout the Cross Examination.

COURTROOM, LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4—(U. P.)—Two state alienists today struck telling blows at the insanity defense of William Edward Hickman, former Kansas City high school boy on trial for the murder of Marion Parker, 12-year-old daughter of a Los Angeles banker.

Dr. Cecil Reynolds of Los Angeles, and Dr. Paul E. Bowers, former superintendent of the Indiana hospital for the criminally insane, both were called by Asa Keyes, district attorney, at today's session.

Both testified that in their opinion Hickman was sane at the time of the murder of the little school girl.

Their testimony was based on careful and repeated examinations of Hickman in his cell in the Los Angeles county jail following his return from Pendleton, Ore., where he was captured after the most sensational man hunt the Pacific coast has ever known.

Jerome Walsh, chief defense attorney for Hickman, submitted the two alienists to such a rigid cross examination that the entire session was taken up with their testimony

PETROLEUM MAN ORDERED CITED TO FEDERAL COURTS

Chicagoan, Who Defied Teapot Investigators, Wins Temporary Release From Senatorial Arrest, But Solons Act Swiftly In Double Barrelled Move To Deal Out Punishment—Progress Made By Probing Body.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.) —A fighting United States senate appeared determined tonight to punish Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana, for alleged contempt, either at its own bar or in the Federal courts.

THE WEATHER.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—The weather outlook for the period from February 6 to February 11, inclusive, follows: Upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys: Occasional periods of precipitation throughout week; temperature mostly above normal south portions and near normal or above north portions, but becoming colder about close of week over both districts.

Nebraska and Kansas: Cloudy and somewhat unsettled Sunday and Monday; not much change in temperature.

While Stewart won a temporary release from senatorial "custody" after spending eighteen hours under arrest for defying the senate, the upper branch of congress moved swiftly to deal out punishment to him if he persists in refusing to answer questions concerning disposition of the Continental Trading Co.'s $3,080,000 Liberty bond fund.

In less than a minute after learning that Stewart had been liberated on a writ of habeas corpus, the senate struck back at him by adopting two resolutions. The first ordered employment of special counsel to defend Stewart's arrest and oppose the writ. The other ordered him cited by Vice President Dawes to the local Federal courts for prosecution on a contempt charge.

The double barrelled action was accompanied by some sharp debate in which democratic senators demanded that the court action be dropped and Stewart sent direct to jail from the floor of the senate. Senators Caraway, democrat of Arkansas, and Heflin, democrat of Alabama, both demanded that the senate, itself, try Stewart and sentence him to jail if he persists in his contempt.

May Name Roberts.

It was announced tonight that Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia, special government counsel in the oil trial, would be named special counsel for the senate in fighting the writ. A resolution appropriating

REED APPEALS TO HIGH COURT

Senator Says Congress Had Right to Vare-Wilson Ballots.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(U. P.)—Chairman James A. Reed of the senate primary investigating committee, filed application with the United States Supreme court late this afternoon for a writ of certiorari in connection with the proposed recount ballots in the Vare-Wilson senatorial election contest.

Reed wants the court to determine whether his committee had a right to seize all Pennsylvania ballots the past summer, when congress was not in session.

Some of the ballots were brought here, but Pennsylvania election officials declined to give up others. The matter was fought out unsuccessfully in the Pennsylvania courts, the Court of Appeals finally holding that the senate itself had the power to decide whether its committees continued in power during recesses of congress.

Reed believes the decision did not reach the heart of the matter at issue and desires a clear cut decision on the case.

The writ filed today is in the nature of an appeal from the decision of the Pennsylvania court.

DEATH CLAIMS DARBY DAY, JR.

Former Husband of "Acid Bride" Passes Away at Santa Monica.

SANTA MONICA, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Darby Day, jr., former husband of Mrs. Bernice Day, the "acid bride," and scion of a multi-millionaire Chicago family, died late today at the Martin sanitarium here, where he was about to undergo an operation for the removal of an abscess, according to a report to the coroner.

Day divorced his wife in Chicago after she was sentenced to serve one to fourteen years in San Quentin prison for throwing acid in his face. She was released on parole, partly through Day's efforts, it is said, after serving about a year. Rumors were current at times that the couple had a reconciliation.

The young millionaire son of a Chicago insurance man, lived in Beverly Hills. He engaged in business here for some time and figured in the news at various times and prominently when he was sentenced to serve sixty days in the Hollywood jail for reckless driving. He was paroled after serving sixteen days.

Day was suffering from an abscess and was taken to the sanitarium, where surgeons made preparations for an operation. He was placed under an anaesthetic and the surgeons report that he suddenly became lifeless. The exact cause of death was not known late today, but was believed to be heart failure.

Shank, Morgan, Minn., farmer, telephoned the airport, asking to speak to Gene.

The United Press informed Shank that his son was still in the air after breaking all existing records in plane loping.

"So Gene broke a record. Well, that's fine. Please be sure to tell him to call me when he comes down. I must hurry to tell mother," the parent said.

Shank called his father just as soon as he climbed out of his flying togs. What he said in the conversation was not divulged. He came out of the telephone booth smiling.

Shank's first attempt at record smashing plane looping was made Friday. After turning the plane 137 times in 100 minutes, engine trouble forced him down.

The remainder of the day and far into the night the pilot and friends worked on the engine, and with dawn today it was pronounced ready for another attempt.

Takes Air About Noon.

Arriving at the airport shortly before noon, Shank wasted little time in making ready for his test. A few friends—most of them fellow law students—were on the field when the plane swooped into the air at 12:05 p. m. Five minutes later the first of the 515 loops was completed.

Ideal weather favored the flier.

When the white plane and its continual looping attracted attention of downtown crowds, many hurried to the airport, and when the plane swooped to the ground four hours later hundreds of eager persons swarmed about it and cheered the aviator.

Equalling the Frenchman's record after three hours in the air, friends speculated on how much longer Shank could hold out. This was allayed when, after the 436th loop the aviator swooped the plane close to the ground and dropped a note. It read:

"Feeling fine. Ship O. K. Will fly until gas gives out. Gene."

From that time on until the propeller stopped, with the gasoline load getting steadily lighter, the pilot swung into more rapid loops, and at times ten in one altitude drop were made.

Motor Sputters.

"Suddenly the engine sputtered and I tried to choke it," Shank said.

"Then it stopped and I brought the plane to the ground. The gas was gone."

Shank is a picturesque figure of the flying fields here. Tall, dark and 22, he fulfills the movie conception of an aviator.

A native of Minnesota, Shank interested himself in aviation about the time, in another Minnesota town—Little Falls—Charles A. Lindbergh, the "Lone Eagle" was alarming the citizens with his daring air stunts.

Later Lindbergh and Shank barnstormed together. But Lindbergh joined the air mail service and Shank finished his education at Morgan, then entered law school here.

Shank said today he hadn't seen Lindbergh since the latter rose to world wide fame.

Refusing to admit he had done anything worthy of acclaim, the youth blushingly declared he would break his own record. He said he would use wing tanks, giving him a considerably larger quantity of gasoline.

SURVEY HOLDS PROSPECTS FOR RIVER SHIPPING

Nickell, traffic experts from the department of commerce, will be in charge of the survey between Kansas City and Yankton, S. D. A similar search for potential tonnage is being conducted by C. C. Kirkpatrick, also of the department of commerce, from St. Louis to Kansas City.

Survey Important.

Upon the results of the survey depend the future of Missouri river navigation, it is believed. If tonnage is insufficient to warrant expense of a barge line by the federal government, many years of campaigning for river navigation in this section will have been in vain.

The traffic experts in charge of the work are here at the request of Maj. General T. Q. Ashburn, director of the government's Inland Waterways corporation, which now operates the Mississippi-Warrior barge system and the Ohio river barge line for the government.

Indications are the traffic men will proceed thoroughly. The survey will require about six weeks or two months.

A bill introduced by Representative James G. Strong of Kansas, calling upon the government to establish a barge line on the Missouri from St. Louis to Yankton, will be held in abeyance until the survey is completed.

Then if the survey shows sufficient tonnage the Inland Waterways corporation will ask congress to pass the Strong bill and river navigation will be an accomplished fact.

Spread of Rabies In West Nebraska Due to Wild Dogs

Dogs that run wild, without human masters, in some of the thinly settled lands in western and northern Nebraska are blamed for the persistence of hydrophobia among domestic dogs and livestock in several communities where efforts made by local health authorities to stamp out the disease have thus far proven succesful.

O'Neill is one place which has had trouble in controlling rabies. There are said to be quite a number of dogs in the ranch country surrounding that city which live out in the wilds and prey on smaller animals and birds, but occasionally find their way into towns and come into contact with tame dogs. Bites inflicted by them are thought to have transmitted hydrophobia in several instances which could not be otherwise accounted for.

The same situation is reported to exist in the territory around North Platte, where several domestic dogs suffering with the malady were killed. Both there and at O'Neill human beings have also been bitten, though not in any case by wild dogs, so far $2,500 to pay him was passed during the afternoon by unanimous vote.

The next move in the unique case will come Tuesday when a hearing on the writ will be held by Justice Jennings Bailey in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia.

The writ issued at 11:30 a. m., was served upon John J. McGrain, deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate, who had kept guard over Stewart since yesterday afternoon, and McGrain and his prisoner appeared in Justice Bailey's chambers where Stewart was freed.

When the court's action was reported to the senate the most deliberate legislative body in the world belied its reputation. Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat of Montana, the so-called "oil prosecutor," immediately sponsored the two anti-Stewart resolutions. They were adopted in some forty seconds without a dissenting voice being raised.

The resolution ordering Stewart's prosecution in the Federal courts closed any loophole through which the oil man might escape punishment if the courts decide that the senate cannot mete out sentence of imprisonment.

Probers Make Progress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—The senate's persistent search for the Continental Trading Co.'s $3,080,000 Liberty bond fund today revealed that $800,000 of the bonds were held for over two years by James E. O'Neil, chairman of the Prairie Oil and Gas Co., then was turned into the treasury of that oil concern.

W. S. Fitzpatrick of Independence, Kas., who succeeded O'Neil as chairman of the company, related this story to the senate public lands committee. He pictured O'Neil as a man facing a limited span of life because of ill health, who wanted to clear his conscience by giving up the bonds.

Fitzpatrick said O'Neil looked upon the bonds as the Prairie company's "share of the profits" from the Continental's strange oil deal. The bonds now are held by the Prairie Pipe Line Co., having been paid to it on a note by the Prairie Oil & Gas Co.

Fitzpatrick, a quite, soft-spoken man, told of O'Neil making a secret trip from Europe to Montreal, Canada, to give up the bonds. The actual delivery, he said, was made in May, 1925, by Clark W. Kountz, vice president of the Prairie and O'Neil's former secretary, in the latter's home in Brooklyn, N. Y. This occurred after the government began suit against Harry F. Sinclair for recovery of the Teapot Dome oil field.

Got $800,000 In Bonds.

"The Prairie Oil & Gas Co., got $800,000 of these bonds through Mr. O'Neil," said Fitzpatrick. "He said they represented his share of the profits of the Continental Trading Co., that he had taken for us. He said he always believed that the bonds belonged to the Prairie and that he wanted to make good to the company.

"O'Neil told us he had paid no income tax return on the bonds because he didn't believe they belonged to him. He told us that the doctors had said he had only eighteen months to two years to live and that he wanted to settle this deal before the end came."

Following this conference with O'Neil in Montreal, Fitzpatrick said, he went to the Brooklyn home of Kountz, where the bonds were turned over to him. He later deposited them in the treasury of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. Some time later, he added, they were turned over to the pipe line company, which now has them. In all this period, he declared, no attempt was made to cash any of the coupons.

"We promised O'Neil not to cash the coupons," he explained. "We didn't want to be put in the position of volunteering any information to the public and Mr. O'Neil asked us not to embarass anybody, as Mr. Sinclair was on trial at the time. We all loved Mr. O'Neil. He had made every one of us in a business way. I have never heard of him doing anything out of the way."

Refused to Explain.

Fitzpatrick said he had interrogated O'Neil about the Continental deal, but that the oil man refused to explain it.

In a final explanation of O'Neil's action, Fitzpatrick sad:

"I thought that Jim O'Neil believed he was going to die. Knowing his religion, I ddn't believe he would go to the grave takng with him a dollar that did not belong to him."

"You thought all along then that he would make some restitution to the Prairie because of the Continental deal?"

"I had some suspicions about this deal," Fitzpatrick concluded. "I won't tell these suspicions because some of the men I suspected are dead now, but I knew all along that Jim O'Neil wouldn't keep a dollar that didn't belong to him."

O'Neil, who fled to Europe four years ago to escape subpoenaes in the oil trials, is still abroad. He has refused to return. The bond investigation will be resumed Monday.

and Dr. Bowers was still on the stand when Judge Trabucco ordered recess at noon for the weekend.

But throughout the cross examination they remained unshaken in their claim that Hickman was sane and capable of distinguishing between right and wrong at the time of the act.

This is the test, under California law, which must be applied in determining the fate of the youthful slayer who turned to crime in the hope of raising easy money for a college education.

If the jury of eight men and four women decides on the evidence submitted that Hickman was capable of distinguishing between right and wrong when he killed the girl, he will be hanged in the state prison at San Quentin.

If found insane and incapable of making such distinction Hickman must be committed to a hospital for the criminally insane.

Dr. Reynolds hit at the evidence submitted by two alienists for Hickman before the defense closed late yesterday by refusing to admit there was a "delusion" on the part of Hickman that he was guided by Providence in committing the crime.

"There were no delusions on the part of Hickman at that time," Dr. Reynolds retorted to the prying questions of Walsh and the latter quickly shifted his course in examining the witness.

Points To Self Control.

The fact that Hickman sat unmoved in the courtroom as his father, mother and brother took the witness stand and bared the past of the family in their effort to prove Edward insane was an evidence of self control and not lack of emotion, Dr. Reynolds asserted.

The defense contends that Hickman's alleged insanity is shown in part by his lack of emotion and points to the fact that he paused now and then to play a phonograph record while dismembering the body of the Parker girl in his apartment in Los Angeles two days after he kidnapped her.

Dr. Bowers followed Dr. Reynolds and declared emphatically his belief that Hickman was and is sane at the very outset of his testimony.

Dr. Bowers told in the county jail aminations made in the county jail, all of which, he said, proved the Hickman's sanity.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 4—(U. P.)—Tired and chagrined, Thomas Hickman returned to El Paso tonight from Los Angeles where he told the secrets of his life in an effort to show that his son, William Edward Hickman, murdered Marion Parker because he inherited insanity.

"California is bloodthirsty for my son's life," said Hickman, who testified as a defense witness at the "Fox's" sanity hearing.

"Everybody in California wants Edward to be hanged," he said.

"Right after Judge Hardy was disqualified, I heard a policeman make a speech to a crowd in the street.

" 'They've changed the jurge, but we're going to see that Hickman is hanged anyway,' he told the crowd."

The elder Hickman, who is a railroad employe here, sobbed at times when he spoke of his son.

"What do you think about me, Dad," Hickman said his son asked him when he visited him in his cell.

When Hickman answered: "I don't see how in God's name you ever committed this worst crime I ever heard of," the youth replied: "I sometimes think so myself,' the railroad man said.

Bids Son Goodbye.

"When I went to tell my son godbye, I couldn't keep a lump in my throat down," Hickman said.

"Edward noticed this and said: 'Don't worry.

"He asked me if I had been molested. When I told him I had not, he added: 'Well, they will. Look out or they'll get you; they're out to lynch us all.' "

The young slayer confided to his mother that officers had threatened him with the mob in Oregon to obtain his confession, the "Fox's" father asserted.

"Edward told his mother that when he was arrested in Oregon the officers showed pictures of the girl's mutilated body to the mob outside the jail. After Edward heard their maddened cries, the officers went in and told him: 'Now if you don't come across we'll throw you out among them.' "

Regarding the merciless baring of their life history to which he and his former wife, the boy's mother, were subjected by the defense attorneys on the witness stand, Hickman said:

"I just had to lose all self respect. I had to tell about things I had thought I never would have ence, but I had to do it to try to save my son's life."

FLOOD CONTROL PLAN OUTLINED

drainage basin of the Mississippi river."

The Missouri has two annual flood stages, one usually in April and one usually in June. Generally short and sudden, the April flood comes from the upper river. The June flood is higher and longer, usually influenced by general saturation of the soil and local rains.

The "Big Muddy" gets its name rightfully, finds Professor Mickey for it contributes 80 per cent of the silt carried by the Mississippi river. Its annual contribution may be half a billion cubic yards of soil. Reduction of erosion not only would save the fields, but actually would promote swifter flow of water, and consequently decreased danger from floods.

"The Missouri cannot be safely conserved nor controlled," Professor Filley asserts, "until means are provided for controlling the stream run-off in such a way as to reduce the flood stages fully 50 per cent."

Then he proposes a five-point plan for control of the Missouri.

1. Construction of headwater reservoirs.

2. Construction of reservoirs in the main tributary. There may be local benefits such as irrigation and power.

3. Creation of storage reservoirs in the great plains region by diversion of water to dammed-up ravines bordering the valley.

4. Utilization of storage water for both drouth and flood control by alternately irrigating and storing the stream. Water supply, navigation and sanitation may also be promoted.

5. Prevention of erosion by forestation. Stabilization of stream channels by means of various improvements.

Seven hundred and fifty million dollars is the sum fixed as adequate for constructing reservoirs on the Missouri, Arkansas, White, Red and Ohio rivers that would reduce the flood menace, obivate the silt problem, and provide the increased energy which the Mississippi must have to cut itself a natural channel to the gulf of Mexico.

On the Missouri alone, Professor Mickey estimates that $300,000 would be sufficient for reservoirs. These investments would be amortized over a period of years by appropriations of water for economic uses.

But before any such plan can be inaugurated, an extensive survey would be necessary.

Professor Mickey details the North Platte irrigation project as an example of what can be accomplished on practically all the main tributaries of the Missouri. A proposed North Dakota reservoir would be located on the big bend near Fort Clark, N. D.

The "competent agency" which Professor Mickey would have created by the United States government, should be "continuous in nature, comprised of leading men with vision, and handicapped with no imposed duties. It should be charged with preparation for a comprehensive and economically feasible plan or policy for the complete conservation, utilization and control of the waters in the streams for the greatest good for the greatest number."

COOLIDGE ASKS AID OF PRESS IN GOVERNMENT

while having grown into a great commercial institution, indispensible to the business enterprise of the country, the press of late had "lost very much of its power as a director of public thought." This, he attributed to the opening of many new avenues of information which have made the public less dependent on the newspapers.

"It (the press) ought to undertake to recapture the dominant position it formerly held as a distributor of current information and director of public opinion. It ought to contest with our universities as an influence for education and match the pulpit in its support of high moral standards."

Elaborating on his proposed national editorial policy, Mr. Coolidge observed:

"There is always need for criticism, but there is likewise need for discrimination— constantly to portray the failures and the delinquents is grossly to mislead the public. It breeds an unwarranted spirit of cynicism.

"Life is made up of the successful and the worthy. In any candid representation of current opinion these things should appear in the forefront . . . .

Should Disclose Connections.

"Whenever any of the press of our country undertake to exert their influence in behalf of foreign interests, the candor of the situation would be greatly increased if their foreign connections were publicly disclosed. All public business ought to be publicly conducted.

"All those who have interests that may be affected by governmental action should have the privilege of employing representatives to present their cause and defend their rights. Nobody questions this on the judicial side, but those who are so engaged are required to be licensed and their appearance before such tribunals is a matter of the court record. As in the case of the federal government, those who are analogously employed in legislative and departmental matters are not required to make a like disclosure of the interests which they undertake to serve, it is necessary to depend on the press for such information.

"One of the strongest safeguards of the integrity of official action is publicity. This does not mean espionage of all personal and private actions of government officials, but it does mean publicity concerning the discharge of the duties which they have chosen to perform."

The president was introduced by J. Fred Essary, of the Baltimore Sun, president of the club. Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, also spoke.

Chain Broadcasting Financial Failure

Army Barracks Budget Calls For 10 Million

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Critics of army housing facilities were answered today by announcement of a barracks and hospital building program calling for the outlay of more than $10,000,000 in the next three years. Living quarters for 18,000 men and 800 hospital beds will be provided. The first of the buildings will be completed at various camps and posts next summer, and the last in the summer of 1929.

States in one country might some time mean intervention in any.

Columbia announced flatly she would not agree to any declaration that directly or indirectly accepted the right of intervention by any nation in the affairs of another.

Gustavo Guerrero, Salvador, president of the committee, had turned his gavel over to another man so he could reply as ordinary member, and he refused, in his speech, even to accept the Mauretau report as a basis of discussion.

Honorio Pueyrredon, Argentina, followed and declared his country's views in opposition to the proposals.

Representatives of Salvador, Santo Domingo, Columbia, Guatemala, Honduras, Ecuador, Mexico and Uruguay followed. None openly supported the United States' case, though Honduran and Uruguayan delegates announced they would introduce compromise formulas. The Honduran report, offered subsequently, contained an important recognition of the Monroe Doctrine:

"Not even on its own volition can an American republic cede any part of its territory to a non-American nation."

Gonzalez Roa, made a cryptic declaration that some interpreted as relating to the United States intervention in Mexico:

"Mexico is the only country of the Western hemisphere that has written the principle of non-intervention in blood."

It was obvious the debate had gone beyond the carefully restricted bounds planned for it. The question in most delegates' minds was whether and how soon it could be checked.

The debate ended tonight with appointment of a sub-committee to find a compromise between the opposing projects.

United States would be willing to sign a treaty with all the powers of the world prohibiting the use of submarines entirely."

The Frothingham resolution not only would express the will of congress, but also would urge the state department to use every effort to achieve the result.

"I have sounded the sentiment of congress and find many members determined upon this action," Frothingham told the committee. "The recent submarines tragedies have aroused them. Unless the committee reports the action as imilar resolution will be adopted as a rider to some measure.

Fifth avenue shopping by Miss Mable Boll, the Rochester heiress, who was to be his passenger, and strong cross winds across the runway here combined to call off the start, Saturday.

Wilmer Stultz, pilot of the Columbia, ordered the heavily laden plane back into its hangar this afternoon when Miss Boll failed to arrive and the wind showed no signs of abating.

The Story of Two Mules

This is a story told to illustrate the fact that the farmer has absolutely nothing to say about the price of grain. Farmer Jones had a pair of trained mules, i. e. they would follow him around the yard, eat out of his hand, and stand unhitched. He took a load of grain to market one day and when he got home found that he was still a little short of money to pay his bills. So he hitched the mules up again and started out with another load. As he was passing Smith's place he saw several men looking at Smith's new Ford. He pulled the mules up along the side of the road, tied the lines around the wagon box, and went to see the car. While he was doing this, the mules got tired of waiting and started up the road to town. Having been there many times before, they naturally walked to the elevator. The grain men weighed the wheat and emptied the wagon. He wrote a check for the grain, tied it on the scoop shovel, and started the team home. When Jones came out he found his wagon and mules gone. He called to Smith, and they both started to walk to town. They had not gone very far when they saw the mules coming over the hill toward them. When the mules pulled up, Jones jumped into the wagon. He found the wagon empty, but saw a piece of paper tied to the scoop shovel. He picked it up It was a check for the wheat. Calling to Smith he said: "By Gosh, the mules got more for their wheat than I did for mine."

Crop Pooling

In order that the farmers may get a cost of production plus a profit price for their grain, it is necessary for them to combine. Crop pooling on a large scale is an efficient method of co-operative marketing. It is a sane and sensible way of organizing the farmers so that they can have something to say about the price of grain.

The way to sell at an advantage is to have a few sellers and many buyers. This situation is just reversed when the farmer comes to market his grain. At the elevator there is only one buyer, the grain dealer, and many sellers, the farmers. The success of the farmer depends upon the number of buyers; the success of the grain dealer depends upon the number of sellers. The more sellers, the cheaper he will buy.

Crop pooling is an attempt to reduce the number of sellers by getting the farmers to have one man sell their grain for them. The more farmers you get to join the pool, the harder you make it for the grain buyer. The ideal condition is when all the farmers sign up. Then the only place the grain buyer can fill his orders is from their agent. When this situation is brought about, the farmer can name the price the grain buyer will have to pay as there is no one else from whom he can purchase.

Believing that this is one of the steps by which the farmer can eventually get on a cost of production basis I am for it and glad to do what I can to further the wheat pool in Nebraska.

STOCK MARKET LITTLE SHAKEN BY RATE BOOST

Bullish Pools Have More Success During Week Than Bears.

Steel Corporation Is Obliged to Dig Into Its Surplus.

BY W. S. COUSINS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. —(INS) — The raising of the rediscount rate of the New York reserve bank to 4 per cent this week did not shake the stock market to its foundations as had been so freely predicted in speculative quarters. Readjustments to the higher bank rate will have to be made, of course, but "tight money" artificially brought about by reserve bank policies is entirely different from real credit stringency brought about by industrial and commercial over-expansion, as the action of the stock market clearly showed.

Simultaneously with the unmistakable improvement the steel and other industries earnings reports have been presented showing the extent and the effect of the mild recession in business in the latter part of last year. For the oil, textile, and other departments of industry that depression extended over practically the whole of 1927, but the falling off in steel and motor-car business occurred chiefly in the latter part of the year.

Thus the steel corporation was obliged to dig into surplus to the extent of nearly $5,000,000 to pay the regular $1.75 a share dividend on the common stock in the last quarter of the year, having earned only $1.05 a share in that period, due to the demoralization of the oil markets. December railroad net earnings are down 10 to 40 per cent as compared with the final month of 1926, and January carloading have been nothing to boast about.

Textile Markets Unsettled.

Owing largely to the erratic fluctuations in the raw cotton market, the textile markets were unsettled this week, and trading in unfinished cotton cloths was light and scattered in the New York primary market. Prices as a rule held steady, although slight concessions were obtained on certain constructions of print cloths and sheetings. The textile situation in New England is far from satisfactory, while the reduction of cotton goods output there has increased further.

The stock market was irregular, but the bullish pools had more success in pushing forward the price for the speculative pets than the bears in depressing prices of railroad and industrial shares. The present market position is that an unwieldly short interest has been built up in the better grade of active industrial shares on the supposition that the long overdue "smash" in stock prices will finally come along and give the bears an opportunity to cover at a fat profit. But the existence of this huge short interest is one of the important supporting arches of the present price structure.

New financing topped a $200,000,000 aggregate this week for the first time since the turn of the year. The amount of new borrowings for the account of foreign governments and European industrial companies was also the largest of the month, while domestic municipal borrowing fell off considerably. February interest and dividend disbursements are expected to aggregate $300,000,000, a good portion of which will be available for reinvestment in the stock and bond markets.

Dun's review reported 31 advances and 30 declines in wholesale commodity prices this week and Bradstreet's food index number is $3.33, against $3.52 in the corresponding week of 1927.

Bank clearings for the week aggregated $11,570,000,000, an increase of 7.6 per cent over the same week last year.

Wheat a Little Lower.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Wheat closed the day ¼c to ½c lower and the week ¼c to 1¼c off. Corn was ¼c to ⅝c up for the day and from 1¼c to 1⅝c higher for the week. Oats finished the day ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower and the week ¼c to ⅝c up.

Wheat displayed a heavy undertone during the week in sympathy with foreign markets. Developments abroad favored bears, butp ressure was offset to some extent by steadiness in the domestic cash markets, in spite of the lack of export buying.

Foreign markets, especially Liverpool, were depressed by reports that indicated Argentine wheat is being offered and shipped in heavy volume. The Canadian visible supply has increased steadily the past few weeks. Weather conditions were generally favorable over the wheat belt.

An excellent cash demand more than offset the bearish ideas of some traders who sold on reports of heavy receipts. Weather conditions the past few weeks have been ideal for movement, but on the other hand there are many reports still coming in telling of disappointing yields.

Hog Prices Drop.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Hogs are slightly lower than a week ago, steers 25c to 50c lower, cows and heifers steady to 25c to 50c lower, lambs $1 higher.

The hog supply and demand was well balanced during the week and little headway was noted in that department. Receipts for the week were 264,000, against 276,000 last week, and 155,000 a year ago. The best hogs closed the week at $8.30 with the bulk of the desirable kinds of all weights at $8.00 to $8.25. Underweights moved at $7.75 to $8.00. Packing sows brought $7.00 to $7.50.

The supply of cattle this week amounted to 51,000, against 46,000 last week and 52,000 a year ago. On account of the liberal run the market was dull and slow. Plain and medium weight steers that comprised the bulk of the supply cleared at $11.50 to $15.00. There are not many steers sold higher than $16.00, but one outstanding load brought $18.50 early in the week. Heavy cows of good quality closed the week at $8.00 to $10.50 and cheaper grades at $6.50 to $8.00. Good yearling heifers moved at $11.00 to $13.00. Demand for calves was unusually strong and prices advanced $2 on most of the light and medium weights vealers that sold at $14.00 to $15.00.

Sheep receipts this week numbered 64,000, against 79,000 last week and 90,000 a year ago. The market was active all week. Top for lambs was $15.25 the highest since the middle of last summer. Ewes gained 25c to 50c and closed at $6.00 to $8.40.

Chicago Cotton Lower.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Cotton prices closed from 27 to 53 points lower than a week ago. Trade was featureless. Outside buying continues light. Weather conditions were mostly favorable over the belt with little precipitation. Today's prices closed from 13 to 28 points lower. March closed at 16.81c, down 13 points; May 16.92c, down 20; July 16.99c, down 17; October 16.72c, down 28.

RETAIL DEALERS MEET AT OMAHA

More Than 500 Expected at Annual Convention of Federation.

Keynote of Gathering Beginning Feb. 14 Is "New Competition."

More than 500 Nebraska dealers in dry goods, ready to wear merchandise, groceries, meats, shoes, furniture and general merchandise will attend the tweny-second annual convention of the Federation of Nebraska Retailers, February 14 to 16, at Omaha, it is indicated in reports reaching the office here of C. W. Watson, general secretary.

According to Mr. Watson the federation was organized at Fremont in 1906, with a view to setting up a central organization for the promotion and development of the retail industry. It also aimed at more efficiency and better service to the public.

During the twenty-two years that have followed, Mr. Watson says, marked changes have taken place in retail distribution. Today we are in an age of new methods and new competition. The result is that the merchant who tries to meet the demands of the age with worn out methods and the obsolete equipment of twenty-two years ago, is absolutely out of the running.

Must Have New Methods.

On the other hand, Mr. Watson continues, the independent merchant who realizes that he is living in an age of paved roads, automobiles, of airplanes, electricity and telephones, recognizes that to compete successfully with other stores in his community, he must have a store better than the one of yesterday. Particularly does he know this when he considers mass production, industrial consolidation, marketing conditions more or less artificially controlled, and the greater enlightenment of the buying public. The man who meets these conditions need have no fear of the new competition.

For the present day merchant to have a store better in every way than the one he operated yesterday, Mr. Watson declares the dealer must buy to better advantage; he must have better advertising, better knowledge of merchandise and better understanding of customers. He also must have better accounting and selling methods.

Consider Each Phase.

Each of these problems will be considered at the federation convention. Men of national and state note, outstanding in their fields, will attend and speak on the several phases of these questions.

W. H. Huntley, in charge of the entertainment arranged by jobbers and manufacturers, says that "good natured fun and wholesome entertainment is the single purpose of the whole city." NEW PERSONNEL OF WORKMEN TO FINISH CAPITOL

Some of the men who have been employed by the J. H. Weise company, in constructing the new capitol, many of them for periods of two to five years, will find themselves out of jobs when the second section is finished and the edifice is turned over to Peter Kiewit's Sons to start operations on the central tower.

The Kiewit firm has its own organization of supervisors and foremen, as well as a considerable force of laborers. It will probably be able to give work to some of the men who have been heretofore employed on the capitol, but for the most part it is expected there will be a new personnel on the job. In the supervisory corps, particularly, the change will be virtually complete.

Specifications under which the contract was let require that citizens of Nebraska shall be given the preference in the employment of labor to erect the new seat of government.

CUT VALUATION BUT BOOST TAX

State Assessment Lowest in Years But Taxes Nearly Double.

Returns of Assessors Not as High as Had Been Estimated.

A total of $63,925,185.39 in taxes on tangible property was levied in 1927, it is shown in the annual report which has just been issued by State Tax Commissioner T. E. Williams.

Of that amount, 19 per cent or $11,862,473.52 was levied for purposes of state government and the remaining 81 per cent, amounting to $52,062,711.77 was for local purposes, including county, city, township, and school.

The actual valuation of tangible property in the state, as reported by the county assesors was $3,133,025,999. This amount is slightly below the preliminary estimate made by the state board of equalization, when it determined the state mill levy. At that time it was estimated that the total valuation would be $3,141,146,610.

Lowest in Seven Years.

The assessed valuation figure is the lowest in seven years, although the actual amount of money collected for state purposes is nearly double the amount collected in any one of those years. Following is a comparison of the assesed valuations and the state tax collected since 1921:

	Valuation	State Tax
1921	$3,312,737,091	$10,930,607
1922	3,202,705,714	7,366,114
1923	3,202,926,404	6,404,457
1924	3,186,488,549	5,736,510
1925	3,159,385,757	7,482,542
1926	3,177,159,318	5,718,836
1927	3,138,025,999	11,862,473

The total local taxes levied in the state in 1927 are divided into the following amounts in proportion to the varies levies:

County, $11,017,262.64; county high school, $1,400,036.46; schools, $28,960,443.46; city and village, $9,061,253.26; and township, $1,622,138.73.

Of the total amount of taxes levied on tangible property, the school taxes amounted to 45 per cent; the state, 19 per cent; the county, 17 per cent; the county high school, 2 per cent; the city and village tax, 14 per cent; and the township tax, 5 per cent.

Tax on Intangibles.

Aside from the taxes assessed against tangible property, a levy of $548,387.73 was made against intangibles. The report shows that $142,235,872 worth of intangible property was turned in for assesment. Of this amount $65,076,652 was in Class A intangibles, which includes all kinds of money and is assessed at a rate of two and one-half mills on the dollar. Class B intangibles, which include stocks, bonds, notes, mortgages, etc., amounted to $77,159,220. This class of intangibles is assessed at 5 mills on the dolar.

Furthermore a total of $2,103,069.52 was levied in special taxes such as poll tax, terminal, drainage, and irrigation taxes. The irrigation tax tax was the heaviest of these special taxes, being $832,904.90. Scotts Bluffs county paid approximately half of this amount.

Of all the counties in the state, Colfax county had the highest total tax levy. In that county the total tax paid on each $1,000 valuation was $54.90. Red Willow, Scotts Bluff, and Custer counties ranked nearly even with Colfax county with respective levies of $52.48, $50.55, and $50.638.

Arthur and Banner counties were the lowest. The Arthur county levy was $12.85 per $1,000, and the Banner county levy was $12.15. Neither of these counties levied either city or township taxes.

Another feature of the report is the comparison of the cost of securing the 1926 and 1927 assessments. In 1926 the cost was $422,607.89, while in 1927 it dropped to $362,569.28.

Americanization Topic at Meeting Republican Women

A talk on Americanization was delivered by Mrs. Margaret Carns Saturday afternoon at a meeting of the Women's Republican club held at the Lindell hotel. Miss Clara Smith conducted a class on election laws of the state of Nebraska.

In her talk on Americanization, Mrs. Carns urged the women to become more interested in the foreigner, his troubles and his viewpoint, in order to make a better citizen out of him.

It was announced that 900 signatures had been secured asking for nomination of Mrs. M. D. Cameron of Omaha for republican national committeewoman.

MANY EXPECTED CHEST BANQUET

Rowland Haynes to Be Speaker at Annual Dinner Tuesday.

Officers of the community chest and council of social agencies are expecting the largest crowd at the annual dinner of organizations at the University club Tuesday night, that has ever attended one of the affairs in Lincoln.

The dinned will be in the evening and Rowland Haynes, secretary of the University of Chicago and past director of the Cleveland, O., community chest will speak. In addition to the members of the chest and council boards, the executives and workers of the welfare societies, invitations have been sent to the workers in the last campaign for funds here, the first successful drive the city has had.

Mr. Haynes will not come to the dinner as a stranger to Lincoln people. In 1913 he was here and made a survey of recreational facilities for the board of education, at the request of Fred Hunter, then superintendent. It was the work done at that time by Mr. Haynes that was mainly responsible for the city and schools recreational program. The plans he recommended then are the same in operation now.

The dinner is open to the public and reservations may be made at the community chest office.

DAIRY PROFITS SHOW INCREASE

Good Records Made By Members Herd Improvement Association.

Number of Cows and the Production Record Both Improved.

More cows—more milk—more profits.

Those are the records hung up last year by twenty-five Lancaster farmers who are members of the county heard improvement association. Figures prepared by J. F. Pierson from Tester George Pfeiffer's reports and submitted to Agent J. F. Purbaugh show that profits per cow averaged as high as $14.75, and as low as $51.32 per cow in the seventeen best herds.

This is the third year that the herd improvement association has operated. Ten members who have been enrolled at least two years increased their profits, during the past season by $13.14 a cow.

Feed cost per cow for the best cow were $93.53, as against $146.75 net profit. The farmers all had a better profit margin this year since it cost but 26 cents to produce a pound of butterfat, compared with 61 cents received, while last year the cost was 24 cents and the price 55. In 1925, the cost was 27 cents and the price 52 cents.

For the third successive year, C. H. Becker & Son have had the best herd. It averages between five and six Holstein cows, with a butterfat record of 480.6 pounds per cow, and a milk average of 12,601 pounds. C. E. Olmsted's herd of about twenty-one cows averaged 407.9 pounds of butterfat each. The Woodlawn Dairy milked about seventy-four cows that gave an average of 367.9 pounds of butterfat.

Other owners of cows in the 300-pounds class were: Leon F. J. Egger, W. W. Rolofson, M. K. Young, I. W. Jacoby, Walnut Springs Farm, E. L. Garrett, James E. Williams, C. E. Cummings, C. H. Borgman, E. C. Willman, Hillcrest Dairy and G. L. Snyder.

Segis Grace Sylvia Waldorf of Woodlawn Dairy was the prize cow. It produced 753 pounds of butterfat, a record for the state. Another cow produced 733 pounds, and a third, 500 pounds.

Cows producing less than 200 pounds of butterfat showed an annual profit of $36; those producing between 200 and 300 pounds showed a profit of $63. Those producing between 300 and 400 pounds cleared $97, while those giving more than 400 pounds of butterfat showed a profit of $141.

The 706 cows in the herds this year averaged 7,925 pounds of milk and 318.7 pounds of butterfat.

Life Underwriters Approve of Plans For Insurance Day

The Lincoln Life Underwriters met Saturday noon at the chamber of commerce and approved the plan of the insurance subdivision for a Nebraska Insurance day in Lincoln, May 18. The meeting was a round-table under the leadership of . R. Douglas and Paul Olheiser. Making and closing sales was discussed.

H. W. Noble was the speaker, he stressed the importance of insurance men using their influence to decrease the number of accidental deaths. There has been a great increase in deaths by violence, he said, stating that the greatest increase was those from automobile accidents.

According to the trend of the life insurance business in recent months Mr. Noble said, there is every reason to believe that business conditions generally in Nebraska in 1928 will be exceptionally good.

LIFE AWARD IN FAVOR OF DEPUY

Man Injured 5 Years Ago Gets Total Disability Compensation.

Life compensation has been allowed by the state labor department to Charles Depuy, a teamster at Belgrade, against his employer, the Continental Gas & Electric Co., and its insurance carrier, for permanent disability sustained by him through concussion of the brain and the fracture of one shoulder when a heavy pole which he was unloading five years ago accidentally struck him.

Depuy has reached an advanced age, and he has heretofore been paid $3.35 at the rate of $15 per week, covering temporary disability and 60 per cent permanent loss of the use of his left arm.

Last November a hearing was held by State Labor Secretary Kennedy on the injured man's application for further compensation because of permanent total disability. The order now made provides that he shall receive $15 a week additional for 71 weeks (making a total of 300 weeks at that rate), and $10.30 per week thereafter so long as he lives.

Agency Manager Gets Award.

Ezra Sohl, who was employed as branch manager at Lyons for Ludwig Janecek, a dealer in windmills, is given an allowance of $15 weekly for an indefinite period, plus medical and hospital expenses, because of an injury to his back in June, 1926, while pulling up an anchor post of a windmill. The injury was communicated through the nerve system to his left leg. The insurance company made compensation payments up to November 22 of the same year and then stopped. It is ordered to pay from that date on until such time as the disability may terminate.

$3,425 For a Leg.

Because his right leg has been rendered useless from the breaking of his hip and foot when he fell from a scaffold in March, 1926, Magnus Thompson of Omaha is granted $3,425 compensation at $15 a week against the Micklin Lumber Co. and its surety, less payments heretofore made, and also the cost of medical and hospital service.

WITHDRAWAL OF SORENSEN MAY ASSIST "SLATE"

Many Wondering Why Norris Manager Declines Make Race.

Lines Drawn for Bitter Fight Between Two G. O. P. Factions.

Why was C. A. Sorensen's name dropped off the McNary-Haugen slate for delegates at large to the republican national convention, after the recognized backers of the Lowden and Dawes presidential booms in Nebraska had called him in and offered him a place thereon?

What was the hidden reason which impelled the manager of Senator Norris's campaign in the latter's home state, less than two weeks following his public announcement that he would seek election as a delegate and wanted to go to Kansas City and make the nominating speech for his presidential favorite, to change his mind all at once and write a letter to Bob Smith withdrawing his candidacy.

The explanation given by Sorensen, that he did not wish to appear in the light of seeking a personnal honor for himself, and thought he could do more for his chief by staying off the delegation, doesn't satisfy many of those who are always looking behind the scenes for the why and wherefore of what goes on in the world of politics. It isn't reasonable, they say, and moreover, if Sorensen really felt that way about it, why did he come out as a delegate candidate in the first instance?

Did Allies Get Cold Feet?

There are rumors going around that Lowden and Dawes boosters fully intended to take Sorensen into their circle and give him a place on the slate, in order to joint the Norris forces with their own and thereby help their joint and several election as delegates; but the incongruity of the combination stirred up so much trouble that they later repented of the bargain and brought pressure on him to step aside.

Objections were said to have been raised in various quarters that Sorensen was not in sufficiently good standing as a member of the republican party to entitle him to be sent as one of its spokesmen and voting representatives at the national convention. The protests, according to current report, were coupled with warnings that if his name were on the slate it would stir up antagonism to the other candidates and perhaps defeat the entire slate.

Bob Smith of Omaha, political manager for Senator Howell, and one of those running with Governor McMullen and Mark Woods on the McNary-Haugen ticket, is said to have been given the delicate mission of seeing Sorensen and telling him that the chances were he would fail of election if he stayed on. The results speak for themselves in attesting Smith's ability as a politician and a diplomat.

It is generally conceded that Sorensen's retirement will smooth the way to some extent for McMullen, Woods, Smith and the others on the ticket with them. Perhaps at some future time, and in some other way, the Norris manager may be rewarded for taking himself out of the picture. Such things do happen in politics.

Norris Support Only Nominal.

Candidates on the coalition ticket are saying that if Senator Norris wins the presidential indorsement of Nebraska republicans in the April primary they will vote for him in the convention "so long as he has a chance." Privately, few of them think he has a chance. Governor McMullen has publicly declared on several occasions that he believes Lowden will be the nominee. Mark Woods is a close personal friend of Dawes and was the man who got the credit for securing the latter's nomination for vice-president four years ago. It is not generally believed that either the governor or Woods will stick to Norris in the convention any longer than decency may require.

An incident which goes to show how the wind is blowing occurred several days ago, when the McNary-Haugen contingent was casting about trying to find suitable condidates to go on its ticket. One of the governor's close friends called up Mrs. H. C. M. Burgess of Lincoln and asked her if she would let her name go on as an alternate.

"I am not for Senator Norris," she replied, "and would not care to be associated with any movement in his interest."

"Norris won't have a look-in; you don't need to worry about that," promptly replied the g. c. f. "He won't get to first base, and we all know it."

Mrs. Burgess nevertheless persisted in her declination, and her name does not appear in the Norris-Lowden-Dawes list.

Dawes Balks on Howell.

Bob Smith, Senator Howell's chief lieutenant, is for Norris because Howell is. But while Smith and Howell are apparently willing to sleep in the same bed with the Dawes and Lowden people out here in Nebraska, the situation at Washington is quite different.

A special newspaper dispatch from there says that Senator Walsh of Montana, who is to be chairman of the special senate committee to investigate utility corporations and their practices, has been trying to get Vice President Dawes to agree to appoint Senator Howell as one member of that committee. Though Howell was manager of two large publicly owned utilities at Omaha, before his election as senator, and is supposed to possess expert knowledge in that field, Dawes has thus far refused to promise that he would be named.

All of which goes to show that politics is darned funny business, and that a voting alliance formed when a campaign is on does not necessarily mean that the participants can be depended on to work together at some other time or place.

Be that as it may, the lines are drawn for a fight to the finish between the Coolidge republicans in Nebraska and those who are making "farm relief" their shibboleth. Both factions now have candidates for delegates in the field, and there are going to be some very interesting developments in the next two months.

Busy Program Arranged For Boy Scout Anniversary Week

The program has been completed for the observance of the eighteenth anniversary week of the Boy Scouts next week. Each day in the week will be devoted to some phase of scout work.

In Lincoln the week will be observed by over 900 registered boys and over 300 men. The outstanding event of the week's program will be a father and scout banquet to be held Friday evening at the Scottish Rite temple. Over 1,200 fathers and scouts are expected. SEEK TO SETTLE ROAD LOCATION

State Officials and Land Owners Apart On the Matter.

(Special to The Star.)

CAMBRIDGE, Neb., Feb. 4—The Cambridge community club has taken action to bring about an adjustment of the long standing controversy over the location of the D. L. D. highway between Cambridge and Indianola, this stretch of fifteen miles being the only one in the state that has not been graveled or scheduled for gravel during the coming spring. No work has been done on this road by the state highway department since the disagreement occurred about a year and a half ago.

One one side of the controversy is the state highway department and on the other the landowners living along the fifteen miles. The state officials favor the road between the two towns paralleling the Burlington the entire distance, stating that this change from the present location would eliminate 40 turns and would reduce the distance by four miles. The present highway has existed for 40 years and the landowners claim that with rounding of corners and straightening in some places it would make an excellent road.

It is further said that the proposed road would be on low ground, under water a great deal of the time and that the purpose of relocation is to shield the railroad against water draining from the hills to the north of the Republican river. Both sides are obdurate and the landowners recently formed an organization and hired an attorney. It is stated that the latter is to assist in an attack on the highway act passed by the last legislature, now pending in the Supreme court.

The Cambridge community club is taking no part in the controversy, but will seek to have it amicable settled. To this end an invitation has been extended to State Engineer Cochran, the commissioners of Furnas and Red Willow counties and the interested land owners to meet here Monday, canvass the whole situation, go over all the ground and wind up with a good will banquet in the evening.

WELL FED COWS MAKE BIG PROFIT

(Special to The Star.)

SPRAGUE, Neb., Feb. 4.—The records of the Lancaster Dairy for January show that the average butterfat production for all the cows on test was 28.6 pounds per cow. The best production for any one herd was 46.7 pounds per cow and the lowest production was 17.8 pounds.

The feed cost per cow in the high herd was three times as much as that of the low herd, but the profit was 260 per cent greater than that of the low herd.

The records show some exceptional productions for the month. A Holstein owned by George L. Snyder, Waverly, has credit for 92.3 pounds of fat and a 12 year Holstein owned by C. E. Olmstead Lincoln, produced 85.5 pounds. Another Holstein owned by C. H. Becker & Son, Emerald, produced 78.3 pounds of fat in her fourth month, and Guernsey owned by Glenn Talbot had 71.1 pounds. A Holstein at the state prison produced 70 pounds of fat. All of these cows were well fed, but were milked only twice daily.

PARENTS ASKED HELP GUARD BOYS OWNING BICYCLES

The safety committee of the Lincoln Auto club is sending warnings to the parents of all boys owning bicycles, according to Earl Coryell, secretary. The warning stresses the need of riders observing the city traffic laws, and cautions drivers of motor cars that they should always be on the lookout for the boys. Parents also are being cautioned against allowing children to use the streets while rollerskating.

If injuries to bicycle riders are to be kept at a minimum, the warning says, "we must have the co-operation of both the parents and the boys themselves. Many bicycles are without good brakes although they should be a part of the equipment of each, just the same as on an automobile."

In his report to the club at its annual meeting Mr. Coryell will point out that of $16,220,373 in federal aid apportioned to Nebraska for highways, but $11,234,189 has been used. There is still $4,986,183 that has not been expended, the report says. The figures are of June 30, 1927, Mr. Coryell says, declaring that since that date large expenditures not yet tabulated by the club have been made in the state.

MRS. M. J. WELCH.

In the passing of Mrs. M. J. Welch, Wednesday, January 25, another of Nebraska's pioneers has gone. She was just less than 79 years of age, and for the past fifty-five years her home has been almost continuously at Milford and Lincoln.

Common to the custom of the time, she came to the state overland in company with her husband, John T. Welch, and two small children. They crossed the muddy, swollen Missouri in the early spring on a ferry at Nebraska City, and traveled thence by way of the Lincoln branch of the Oregon trail to Seward county, where they "took up" land.

A portion of that land which the Welch family acquired at that early date has for the past eight years been donated to the use of Lincoln Camp Fire girls, and is known as Kiwanis camp on the Blue river. Because of physical disability and much time spent with her daughter, Mrs. S. L. Wood, at Spokane, Wash., in late years, she was not a frequent visitor at Kiwanis camp. Her interest was none the less keen and it was her desire that this constructive work for girls might go on indefinitely.

During all of this time in Nebraska, through the lean years of pioneer hardship-prairie fires, grasshoppers, brizzards and drouths—as well as the more prosperous times, Mrs. Welch showed in her humble way the keenest interest in young people and their development. Her aid and advice has gone out not only to two generations of her own children and grandchildren through the Lincoln and Peru schools, but to many other boys and girls who needed a helping hand.

Her husband, John T. Welch, preceded her in death by thirty years. She is survived by two brothers and one sister: Rev. W. B. Alexander, for fifty years a member of this conference of the Methodist church and now living at Long Beach, Cal., D. B. Alexander, of Esterville, Ia., and Mrs. J. E. France, of Denver, Col.; also by one daughter and two sons: Mrs. S. L. Atwood, of Spokane, Wash., and A. J. Welch, of Milford, and Dr. J. S. Welch, of Lincoln.

Interment occurred at Blue Mound cemetery, Milford, where other members of the family are buried.

JOSEPH LAMB.

Joseph Lamb was born December 19, 1835, at Detroit, Mich., and died January 31, 1928, at his home in Hubbell, Neb., at the age of 92 years, 1 month and 12 days. He passed his early life in Michigan and Canada.

At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in the One Hundred Thirty-ninth Ohio infantry and served until he was honorably discharged at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. In April, 1865, he came to Nebraska and took up a homestead in Rose Creek precinct, Thayer county, in 1868. He resided there until his death.

He was united in marriage to Mary Ann Ball, December 11, 1870. To this union were born four children, three having preceded him in death. The eldest, John J., now resides near Reynolds, Neb. Mrs. Lamb died August 28, 1879.

He was married to Linetta Chapin August 4, 1883. To this union were born five children, all of whom survive him. He is survived by his wife, one daughter and five sons. Funeral services were held at the Hubbell Methodist Episcopal church with interment in the Hubbell cemetery.

About one-third of the total, or $635,605, was represented by 5,211 claims against the general fund. Warrants against the gasoline tax fund numbered 1,590, for an aggregate amount of $375,404. The federal aid road fund was drawn upon to the extent of $255,714.

From the capitol fund payments were made totalling $152,562. The temporary school fund was subjected to warrant drafts of $474,850, that being the amount of the semi-annual school apportionment.

BEGGAR'S OPERA WELL RECEIVED

English Stars Present Expurgated Edition of 200 Year Old Comedy.

A piquant, lively, and spirited offering, "The Beggar's Opera," at the Playhouse Saturday evening. A comedy, really, not too subtle, certainly, but expurgated, we are told —can it be for the ears of 1928 attendants of the drama—and only incidentally an opera. Those ... passed by the lesser known numoer for the self-published attractions may well regret it. And many did, for the English stars sang their tunes and danced their pleasing steps to a Lincoln audience that filled all but a few rows of the orchestra and of the balcony.

"The Beggar's Opera," two hundred years old, revived eight years ago, shows that age cannot harm, but rather enhances an interesting drama. With a few new airs for the music, with a little deleting for modern purposes, this show which delighted Lunnon town two centuries ago, and which has "no honest man or woman—but all of human nature," as the beggar explains delights the most ardent critics of the theater today and fascinates the most ardent patrons.

Only one great voice in the cast, that of Mac Heath, who found the gallows preferable to a quartet of wives, and his was worthy of the spaces of the coliseum. A rich and splendid voice is his, with unusual range and lyric power. The others, sweet voices, and true, but too gentle for the trills and flute notes an opera containing less of an American musical comedy idea would demand. The music is but a series of ballads, half a hundred or so, calm, quaint little things, requiring no profound orchestration, but nevertheless immensely enjoyable.

In the revival of the Newgate pastoral, much of the quaint and numorous aspect has been retained. The posing of the characters, the asides, the confidential remarks to the audience, the inevitable approach to the footlights, all marked "The Beggar's Opera" as of an earlier day.

There are several numbers that will stay in the minds of musical Lincoln for some time. The duet of Polly and Mrs. Peachum and the solo of Mac Heath in the first act were remarkably fine, as was the trio in the last scene of the second act. The chorus work aroused much appreciation in the audience which was unusually generous with its applause. The bright costumes of the choristers added an interesting atmosphere.

The company in the main is composed of the original cast who appeared at the Lyric theater, Hammersmith, London, when this opera was revived by Nigel Playfair on May 12, 1920. In its revival it ran for four years, and has been brought to this country a couple of times, making brief tours. Sylvia Nelis, Polly Peachum of the company; George Baker, MacHeath, and Celia urrill, as Lucy Lockit, who carried the second feminine lead were all of the original company.

While not having the integral part in "The Beggar's Opera" that the orchestra in modern opera has, this orchestra was a treat in itself. Both in its overtures and in its accompaniment, it surpassed several that have greater fame, and served so easily to enhance the voices of the singers, rather than to compete with them, as has been done in other offerings this winter. Incidentally, but of great importance, two of the eight players were men, also the original orchestra of the opera.

STATE GAS FUND STILL DEPLETED

Contractors Claims and Bills Totaling $350,000 Being Held.

About $250,000 of contractors' claims for work done on state highways during the past fall and early winter are still in the hands of the state finance department, waiting for money to come into the gasoline fund to pay for them. There is a further accumulation of $100,000 in bills for maintenance work done on highways throughout the state, also unpaid.

It is expected that all this indebtedness can be cleaned up during February, from the proceeds of gasoline tax collections and motor vehicle license fees for 1928 paid into the state treasury. State Engineer Cochran will then be able to start the new season with a clear slate; but there will be no large cash reserve to draw upon, left over from the winter months, as has been the case in prior years.

The exhaustion of state funds available for good roads was brought about by the continuous run of mild weather up to the early part of December and the absence of snowstorms or rainfall to interfere with construction even up to the first of the year, and since. In ordinary seasons, much work has to be abandoned in the fall months and finished the next spring. This time contractors were able to go right ahead and complete their projects, and the claims for payment piled up accordingly.

On December 1 the amount of money owed by the state for highway construction and maintenance was $845,000. This has been reduced about 60 per cent in the past two months and March 1 will probably see the last of the I. O. U.'s taken up. Gas tax brings into the treasury about $270,000 per month at this time of year. Motor vehicle license receipts will be very heavy in February; perhaps as much as half a million dollars.

WOODLAWN DAIRY COW SETS A NEW NEBRASKA RECORD

Katura Sylvia Waldorf, 829668, bred and owned by Woodlawn Dairy of Lincoln, has just completed an official record of 755.8 pounds of milk and 36.01 pounds of butter, thus establishing a new state record for combined butter and milk produced in seven days. She averaged 107.8 pounds of milk per day with an average test of 3.81 per cent for butter fat. Katura secured the record by retaining a high test with a material gain in milk. One of her daughters, Katy Sylvia Lyndale Echo, 1008024, made a record of 18.5 pounds of butter in seven days with an average test of 3.66 per cent.

On semi-official record, Katura has averaged one hundred pounds of milk per day for fifty-seven days. She produces her own weight in milk every fifteen days.

2,600 IN SUBURBS MUST REGISTER

City Clerk Berg has arranged for a registration of voters in University Place three days and as many evenings next week, and probably will go to Bethany the following week. He hopes to complete the work in four days.

There are approximately 2,100 electors in University Place who have not registered, Mr. Berg said Saturday, who must do so if they intend to vote in the spring primary. To expedite the work he will set up an office in the old suburban city hall and will be ready Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock. The registering will continue through Thursday and the office will be open evenings from 7 to 9, after closing at 5.

The work will be done by Mr. Berg and his assistants. Tuesday Mr. Berg and Miss Adele Bodie will be in the office. In the evening Forest Moeller, deputy city clerk will help Mr. Berg.

Wedneesday Mr. Moeller and Miss Selma Schaus will be on duty. They will be relieved in the evening by Mr. Berg and Ben Boeke.

Mr. Berg and Miss Schaus will be in charge Thursday being relieved at night by Mr. Moeller and Mr. Boeke.

According to Mr. Berg, every elector in the city proper and the suburbs must register to vote in the primary unless they voted at one or the other of the last two elections. To skip voting at two consecutive elections voids a registration, but a person may vote at every other election, however, and continue going to the polls with no fear of not being allowed to vote.

According to Mr. Berg there are about 2,600 in the two suburbs who must register, while several thousand will be required to do so in the city proper.

The fact that the clerk recently rearranged a number of the voting precincts will not make registration necessary in any of them except where the elector has not cast a ballot at one or the other of the last two pollings.

President Coolidge Urges Press To Co-operate With Government In Its International Affairs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—President Coolidge spoke as follows at the dedication of the new building of the National Press club here tonight:

Mr. Chairman and Fellow members of the National Press club:

While I have been a member of this club ever since I have been in Washington, it is seldom that I have had the opportunity to visit its quarters. Although I have not done much on your staff as a reporter, I have acquired a fairly good record as a contributing editor, and though I have not written many stories, I have nevertheless had some success in the making of news. Even with all the ingenuity that characterizes the press of the present day, most writers are dependent upon some real news as a source of inspiration for their reporting.

Aside from the office which I hold, these accomplishments might be assumed to be some warrant for asking me to participate in the dedicatory exercises of our new club building. We are located here on one of the most important corners of the business section of the city of Washington. The site is historic ground. For a considerable time it was associated with the journalistic profession. The easterly side of Fourteenth street, between F street and Pennsylvania avenue, was formerly known as Newspaper row. The building on this corner was used by newspapermen from shortly after the Civil war until the early seventies, when it was torn down to make room for the famous Ebbitt house. In that hotel lived many eminent men who reached national prominence during the succeeding generation. That old house and some of its neighbors gave way to provide the location for this magnificent building. It has a frontage of 270 feet on F street and 150 feet on Fourteenth street, and occupies nearly a whole acre. The corner stone was laid in the spring of 1926, and this great structure of composition limestone, steel, and concrete, as near fireproof as possible, rising 14 stories, was completed late last year. It has a large moving picture theater and there are stores and offices around the auditorium and the stage.

In the rest of the property there are located 1,058 individual office units. Already more than 400 newspapers are represented in this building, although some of the correspondents are connected with more than one publication. The National Press club occupies the larger part of the thirteenth and all of the fourteenth floors, giving it a floor space of 27,000 square feet. The club has a large auditorium with a seating capacity of close to 1,000, spacious dining rooms, and a library capable of holding 5,000 books. The other facilities are such as are characteristic of a first-class club.

It is hoped by the management that this property, valued at about $10,000,000, may be free from incumbrances within twenty-five years. Its income will then be devoted to the benefit of the National Press club, which will be in possession of more than $500,000 of income each year. It is planned to give awards for journalistic achievement and use the surplus profits of the property for the promotion of the general welfare of the newspaper business. The journalistic profession as it is represented in the city of Washington lends itself especially to a movement of this kind. Like everything else connected with the government of the United States, it has had a very remarkable growth.

Suspends Publication.

It is said that it was not until 1796 that any newspaper was published here. After struggling along a little more than a year with its semi-weekly, Benjamin More, a bookseller, who was the proprietor of the enterprise, announced: "The Washington Gazette will not be published again until the publication is attended by some profit to the publisher." In October of 1800 a triweekly, called National Intelligencer, was started, and thirteen years later became a daily. Ever since that time the disputes between certain members of the congress and those reporting its proceedings have been chronic. The Evening Star was founded in 1852 and the Washington Post in 1877. The Herald, Times, and News are of much more recent date.

But this organization exists not so much on account of the local and powerful press of this city as because of the large number of correspondents who are here from all parts of the nation to report the doings of the federal government. This, too, has been a remarkable growth. In 1862 the senate press gallery listed only thirteen correspondents. In that year Whitelaw Reid managed the Washington bureau of one of the New York dailies. It was more the practice in that time for one man to be employed by a number of papers. At the present day there are about 500 correspondents here, connected with the press all over the world. Some of the metropolitan dailies have as many as nine on their local staff.

It is this condition that has made possible the establishment and growth of our National Press club. An effort was made in this direction as early as 1867 by a social organization made up entirely of local newspaper men, known as the Washington Press club, which was in existence several years. In 1892 the local newspaper men started the National Press club, which gave some notable entertainments, but was later disbanded on account of financial difficulties. The present National Press club dates from 1908. Its purpose was to provide an organization and gathering place in Washington for the benefit of newspaper men throughout the country. It has made steady progress until it has a resident membership of nearly 1,000 and a non-resident membership of 800. In the character and importance of the news which it reports, in the power which it represents, its opportunities surpass those of any other press club in the world.

It is possible to see in this spacious building, so magnificently equipped, a symbol of the development of the whole United States. The old, outworn, the poorly adapted, has been discarded and removed to make place for the new and the modern. It represents an increase in power, not by any means limitless, but very vast. The process has transformed our Press club into a great business institution. Something analogous to this has taken place in the journalism of our country. The press itself, by the very force of circumstances, in order to survive has been changed from an organization of partisan and personal opinion into a very great commercial organization. It has become much more important, in fact indispensable, to the business enterprise of the country, but appears to have lost very much of its power as a director of public thought. There are so many other avenues of information that people are much less dependent than formerly upon the press for their knowledge of men and of affairs.

Points to New Standards.

Now that the transition has been made through various consolidations, and through the elimination of the unsuccessful, the journalism of the United States has on the whole established itself according to the new standards upon a profitable financial basis. It ought to undertake to recapture the dominant position it formerly held as a distributor of current information and a director of public opinion. It ought to contest with our universities as an influence for education and match the pulpit in its support of high moral standards.

In a republic the field which is open to the press as an instrument of clean and sound government is limitless. It ought to be the supporter of efficient local administration and wise national statesmanship. In international affairs it should co-operate with its own government and extend to foreign interests a tolerant and sympathetic candor. Foreign interests have the privilege of being represented here. The right to fair treatment is as wide as humanity. But when foreign governments are represented here, their agents are required to come publicly accredited and be publicly received. For generations our law has forbidden our own citizens entering into any negotiations with a foreign government concerning its relations with our own government. Such negotiations can only be carried on under the direction of the president. Whenever any of the press of our country undertake to exert their influence in behalf of foreign interests, the candor of the situation would be greatly increased if their foreign connections were publicly disclosed. All public business ought to be publicly conducted.

One of the strongest safeguards of the integrity of official action is publicity. This does not mean an espionage of all personal and private action of government officials, but it does mean publicity concerning the discharge of the duties which they have chosen to perform. All those who have interests which may be affected by governmental action should have the pritilege of employing representatives to present their cause and defend their rights. Nobody questions this on the judicial side, but those who are so engaged are required to be licensed and their appearance before such tribunals is a matter of court record. As in the case of the federal government those who are analogously employed in legislative and departmental matters are not required to make a like disclosure of the interests which they undertake to serve, it is necessary to depend on the press for such information.

It is perhaps stating the obvious to say that the press should be patriotic. This does not require any disparagement of the advantage which otheir people enjoy in their own country. Whatever it may be in some 4individual cases, other countries are best adapted to the people as a whole who live there, and our country is certainly the best country for our people. The freedom enjoyed here, the institutions of self-government, the projection of the individual, the standards of living, the comforts and even the luxuries, the unexampled progress in national development, and, in general, equal opportunity, not in any narrow and limited sense but on both the material and spiritual sides of life, broad and unbounded—all these are sufficient to warrant the admiration and reverence of every informed mind.

Hearts Not Hardened.

More progress has been made in this country in scientific development in the last 150 years than had been made in all the world from the day of Julius Caesar to George Washington. Our successes have not betrayed our judgment or hardened our heart. In spite of sporadic outbreaks of violence, one of our chief characteristics is a profound reverence for humanity. On our record and on our prospects there is every reason for an abiding faith in our country.

While these considerations may well be dwelt upon as justifying pride in our country, the reasons for love of country appear to lie deeper. It can scarcely be said that it is the people of great and powerful nations who have exhibited the greatest attachment to the land of their birth. Those who have originated in countries that were small and inconspicuous and poor have rather been marked by a devotion to the soil which bred them above those who were reared among more affluent circumstances. Nevertheless, it has been that strain, nourished on the sentiment of patriotism, who, when they have been transferred to countries having broader opportunities, have been an important factor in human development. They have exhibited a tenacity of purpose, a strength of character, and a moral fibre that has mare them a most important element in any country wherever they have been found. Next to devotion to the home, devotion to the country has been one of the strongest and most indispensable attributes contributing to human progress.

The constant criticism of all things that have to do with our country, with the administration of its public affairs, with the operation of its commercial enterprizes, with the conduct of its social life, and the attempt to foment class distinctions and jealousies, weaken and disintegrate the necessary spirit of patriotism. There is always need for criticism, but there is likewise need for discrimination. There is a requirement for justice and truth. Wherever there is the genuine there will be some counterfeits But our own nation, or any other nation, does not consist of the counterfeits; it consists of the genuine. Constantly to portray the failures and the delinquents is grossly to mislead the public. It breeds an unwarranted spirit of cynicism. Life is made up of the successful and the worthy. In any candid representation of current conditions they have the first claim to attention. In the effort of the press to destroy vice, it ought not to neglect virtue.

An Agency of Prevention.

These are some of the ideals toward which, I believe, the journalistic profession should work. I am conscious that they are not yet attainable in their entirety, and yet they may be closer at hand than many of us realize. As civilization advances the time element of reactions greatly decreases. Reforms do not always grow up gradually. They are likely to occur all at once. It is, rather, abuses that creep in on us with a slow growth. The spirit of mankind is more and more asserting itself, more and more demanding that the affairs of government and society be conducted in accordance with the laws of truth. The people who neglect that precept are bound for a moral explosion. Publicity is not only the main agency of reform, it is likewise the main agency of prevention. In its true function it is not the voice of the individual reporter or editor, but the voice of public expression. It represents the thought, the hope, the aspirations, and the faith of the people.

It is a great opportunity that comes to the members of the National Press club of Washington. This city is not the only the seat of our federal government and the political center of our country, but it is bound to become more and more the center of science, of art, and of literature. Because of the position which the United States holds in the world, it will assume increasing importance in international affairs. Because you have places here of great power, you are likewise charged with great responsibilities.

In no small degree you are the keepers of the public conscience. By being servants of the truth you can help to create and support that confidence in our institutions, and in each other, which is the foundation of national progress and prosperity. You can give to the nations a better understanding of each other and increase the harmonious relationship, the spirit of good will and friendship, which will bring to all peoples more of the blessings of contentment and of peace.

HAROLD CAYWOOD

The Motor Industries Corporation of Omaha, has announced that the Lincoln Wheel and Brake Service Co., Inc., owned by George G. Derksen, jr., and Harold Caywood, whose pictures appear above, will be the distributor for its line of wheels, rims and parts in the South Platte territory of the state. The new concern which is opening a shop at 324 South Twelfth street, will be equipped to test all makes of brakes and verify wheel alignment for all cars.

This new service for Lincoln motorists is made possible by the installation of a Jumbo brake testing machine, the first to be purchased in this territory. The machine was being installed Saturday and will be ready for use at once. To test the brakes on any car, the vehicle is driven upon the brake testing machine and the wheels fitted into a set of rollers. When the motor is started with the clutch engaged, and pressure is applied to the brakes, a series of four dials indicates the number of pounds of braking pressure thot is being delivered upon each of the four wheels The precise power of the brakes is shown in this manner and any adjustments needed can be made.

Mr. Derksen and Mr. Caywood are both well known in Lincoln. Mr. Derksen has been employed by W. M. Leonard for the past 15 years and has been connected with the automobile business for 20 years. Mr. Caywood has had fifteen years experience in the motor car field and has given his attention to the Cadillac car for the past eight years He is a World war veteran.

REDUCE PRICE NASH MODELS

Cut Made On Standard Six, Special Six and Advanced Six Series.

Announcement today was made by C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company, of reduced prices, effective February 1, ranging through Standard Six, Special Six, and Advanced Six series. These reductions follow hard on the heels of heavy sales at the opening motor shows of the year where the Nash display, with its emphasis on style and new color harmonies, is attracting great attention.

The new Standard Six prices, all f. o. b. Racine, follow: Four-door sedan, $925; touring, $865; cabriolet, $925; two-door sedan, $845; coupe, $845; deluxe sedan, $995. The new price o nthe Advanced Six 5-passenger 4-door sedan is $1,495, and the price of the 5-passenger 4-door Special Six sedan is $1,295.

Nash officials point to this move as the aggressive forerunner of big Nash expansion in sales throughout the country, with Nash in 1928 assumin geven more pronounced leadership in its field than ever before.

In speaking of this price reduction, C. W. Nash said, "Since the New York Automobile show I have been traveling the country attending other shows and dealer meetings and everywhere I find encouraging evidence of healthy business. All that I have been quoted as saying about the prosperous general condition of the country, has been confirmed in the course of these trips.

"Our own sales are proceeding with gratifying force and in view of the fact that our new prices now make the current Nash line the greatest values we have ever offered, I look for even bigger business.'

PRODUCTION OF DODGE MODELS IS SPEEDED UP

Due to the volume of Victory Six orders, which have been received since January 5, when this latest Dodge Brothers product was announced, it is estimated by factory officials that a large percentage of the passenger car production during the year will be Victory the models. Plans for 1928 also include an increase in the production of Standard Four equipped with four wheel brakes and a larger production of Senior Sixes.

Officials of the Dodge company state that the new car embodies several basic innovations in automotive construction and design. To provide road-holding qualities neccessary for high speeds and at the same time to permit the low sweeping body lines dictated by fashion road clearance, Dodge Brothers is employing a design entirely new to the industry. The body and the chassis frame, in the Victory Six, are a single unit.

The entire passenger car production of Dodge Brothers, in all three models, will be supplied in wide varieties of color combinations.

CITY GETS FIRST NEW FORD; EARLY DELIVERIES NOW

The first new Ford delivered in Lincoln was received by Commissioner Ed Duncan Tuesday, January 31, for the city. The car will be used in the street department. The motor number of the car is 12,967 and County Treasurer Albers said that it was the first Ford license application for the year.

According to F. R. Hussong, who sold the car to the city, all indications point for early deliveries from now on of the new Ford models.

Darrow's View of Social Structure Wrong, Says Mayer

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—The opinion of Clarence Darrow, the famous Chicago attorney that humans are "chips" on a stream" tossed back and forth with which we can do nothing, is all wrong, according to Professor Joseph Mayer, head of the department of economics and sociology at Tufts college, Massachusetts and author of that widely read book "The Seven Seals of Science."

"For Darrow to say we cannot do anything about social structure of the world, is wrong," Professor Mayers, who is visiting here, stated.

The Massachusetts educator declared that although we cannot change natural laws it does not mean we are not able to apply them.

"Fire is a natural phenomenon," declared Mayer. "But man has changed it from a menace to a useful tool.

"The automobile is purely an artificial creation yet man made it out of natural resources. Our modern society is just as artificial as the automobile and man made it himself out of nature."

"We haven't done it yet," Professor Mayer explained, "because the foundation of social science is psychology of which we know very little as yet."

AUTO COLORINGS REMAIN BRIGHT

Chrysler Technicians Say Trend Toward Harmonious Use Shades.

The vogue of bright colors has featured automobile fashions the past year, shows no sign of passing, and has been strongly emphasized at the 1928 New York and Chicago national shows. Experienced judges seem to agree that the vivid and picturesquely named shadings which replaced the former somber and monotonous finish of motor cars are destined to occupy a permanent place in public preference.

However, say Chrysler color technicians, the trend is toward a more harmonious use of color, in chromatic blends which employ various related shades of the same basic color, rather than toward sharp contrasts.

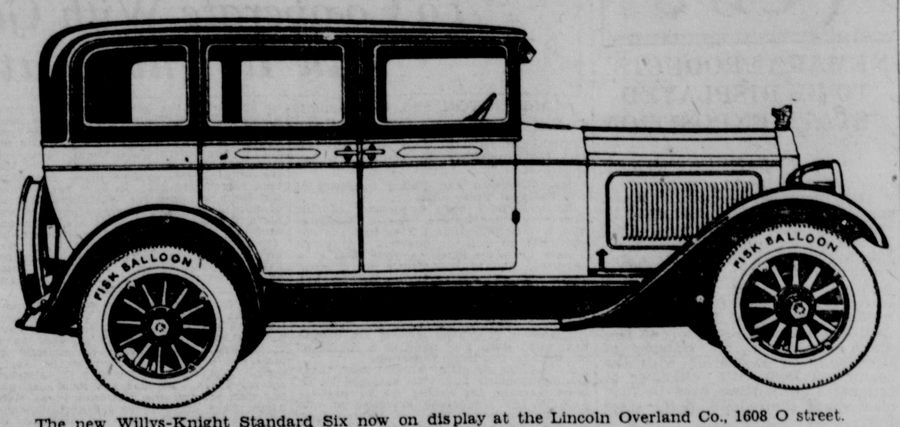

Feminine taste largely guides the selection of new automobiles just as it shapes the great majority of expenditures by American families, and it has evidently decreed a permanent vogue for the light, luscious tones which have been so popular of late in home furnishings, in dress and in hosiery, though of course the more restrained finishes are still available for their adherents.

The prospect at present is therefore that color combinations will continue to be chosen in 1928 with scientific selecton of color values, as during recent months, and with especial consideration to their adaptability for each particular type and model of car.

Chrysler color technicians, who played the leading role in the trend away from the archaic, somber blacks which had established a melancholy monopoly in the minds of motor car builders until about four years ago, point out that the duotone contrasts which featured their original production in 1924 remained the prevailing vogue in motor car fashons until a year ago, when Chrysler was again in the forefront to the change to a new color fashion, characterized by chromatic harmonies and blends rather than widely contrasting hues.

Of the 15 sports fostered by the University of Pennsylvania, only football and basketball showed a profit during the 1926-27 academic year. Upwards of 4,000 students entered in various contests.

Willys-Knight Offers New Model.

The new Willys-Knight Standard Six now on display at the Lincoln Overland Co., 1608 O street.

The recent announcement at the leading national automobile shows of the Willys-Knight Standard Six, which is now being placed into production by Willys-Overland brings this organization into the $1,100 price class for the first time in its history with a Knight sleeve valve motored six

The announcement of the new Knight engined car in the lowest price class ever reached by a Willys-Knight six, opens an entirely new sales field since this car is priced at 20 per cent, or approximately $250 lower than any other Willys-Knight six ever built.

Company officials declare that with a decided trend on the part of motor car buyers toward cars powered by a Knight sleeve valve engine, an unusual sales volume is anticipated for the Willys-Knight Standard Six, which is now brought within the price range of thousands of buyers who formerly were prevented from owning this type of car because of price consideration.

It is stated by John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, that this move has been under consideration since the company started building six cylinder Knight motored cars three years ago.

The start in the six cylinder field was made with the Willys-Knight Great Six which has been one of the outstanding successes in the field of luxury vehicles. This model was followed by the Willys-Knight Six "70" which is now known as the Willys-Knight Special Six and which has been one of the largest sellers in its class since its inception.

The introduction of the Wilys-Knight Standard Six now brings this well known product into the three great price ranges of six cylinder cars above $1,100 and completes the program which was started with the Great Six.

Developments in Knight motor construction during the past three years have been conspicuous both in this country and in Europe and the new Willys-Knight Standard Six is said to include all the most recent and advanced features of sleeve valve design.

In comparison with other types of motors, the gains made by the Knight motor in its general use throughout the world have been markedly greater than those set by any other type of motor construction since 1925.

Conspicuous advantages claimed for this type of power plant include smoother operation, greater silence at all motor speeds and a length of service which has not been equalled by any other form of power plant used for motor driven vehicles

The Knight sleeve valve construction eliminates all of the usual valve mechanism and the intake of fresh gases is positively controlled by the motion of two sleeves sliding smoothly and silently up and down, one inside the other, between the cylinder wall and the pistons, opening and closing the intake and exhaust parts.

These sleeves are actuated by connecting rods driven by an eccentric shaft. This type of power plant has been used by the leading manufacturers of luxury cars in Europe for many years.

Unusually exact standards of fit and finish are maintained in the construction of the Knight sleeve valve motor and notable records of efficiency, power and speed have been established by this engine.

The Willys-Knight Standard Six will be offered in three body types, a four-door sedan, a two-door coach, and a coupe.

Electric Furnace To Play Great Part Making Tool Steel

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Feb. 3—(I. N. S.)—This city, one of the foremost centers of steel manufacture in the world, has given to science a new invention which is expected to play an important part in the making of high quality tool steel.

It is a high frequency electrical furnace, the chief charteristic of which is that it melts steel by wireless.

The process, steel men declare, eliminates a good deal of heavy manual labor, and in one operation produces a greater tonnage at a lower cost than existing methods.

The new furnace has been installed in the steelworks of Edgar Allen and Company. Dr. C. H. Desch, Professor of Metallurgy at Sheffield University, explained the advantages of the invention in an interview with International News Service.

"It provides," he said, "a means of making high-class steel under very strictly controlled conditions, without the slightest danger of contamination by foreign gases or anything of that nature. I believe that it has a decided future, and will prove an implement of the greatest value to the steelmaker."

The process is embodied in a high fgrequency crucible furnace. The furnace is contained in a wooden box, and the actual melting process is controlled by wireless. Between the container of the furnace and the wooden covering there is a water-cooled coil, from which electrical heat is conveyed by wireless to the metal charge.

There is no direct contact between the coil and the charge, the principle of high frequency induction being employed. Thus, without appreciably heating the container, the current renders the metal in the crucible to a molten state in less than an hour.

STUDEBAKER

The Great Independent

Behind every Studebaker and Erskine car are $105,000,000 in actual net assets and great modern research and engineering facilities.

Behind Studebaker Performance Records —engineering genius!

AS a result of the engineering genius in Studebaker motor cars, Studebaker now holds all the highest endurance and speed records (from 1 mile to 25,000 miles) for fully equipped stock cars, regardless of power or price. Headed by D. G. Roos, Studebaker's engineering staff leads the industry in point of actual achievement.

It is the work of genius to produce such a car as The Studebaker Commander—the car that went 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes. Nothing else on earth ever ran so far so fast. Studebaker engineering genius is reflected, too, in the increase of the power of The Studebaker Dictator from 45 to 70 h.p.—with greater economy of operation—and with no increase in price.

Constantly kept up-to-date

During the past three years Studebaker engineers have adopted such advancements as the magazine lubricating system; thermostatic cooling system; no-draft ventilating windshield; engine thermometer on dash; full-vision welded steel bodies; coincidental lock to steering and ignition, etc. Some of these improvements were pioneered by Studebaker and are still exclusive Studebaker features.

Studebaker engineers have provided such an ingenious lubricating system that you need change oil but once every 2500 miles.

And now, as a result of advanced engineering, Studebaker and Erskine cars may be driven 40-miles-per-hour the day they are delivered. No more tedious "breaking-in" at 20-mile speed.

Studebaker spends millions to make sure

Engineering and laboratory facilities for experimentation and research are of the utmost importance. Studebaker provides its brilliant staff of research men headed by W. S. James, former section chief of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, with the most complete facilities that money can buy.

In Studebaker's laboratories technicians test all raw materials. Over the diversified roads and grades of Studebaker's million-dollar Proving Ground, Studebaker and Erskine models are driven in extended tests of speed and mechanical endurance.

Studebaker gives more; costs less

Because Studebaker builds bodies, engines and chassis for Studebaker cars, profits of outside manufacturers are reduced to a minimum. These savings are passed on to you in the form of higher quality materials and the highest type of precision workmanship—at a low One-Profit price.

Before you buy a car, take the wheel of one of the new Studebakers. It will reveal the most advanced engineering of 1928 combined with Studebaker's 76-year-old traditions of quality.

Rickard Reaches Out for Grab at J. Bull's Gold

'Tex' Shifts Plans; Picks On London

King of Promoters In Realm of Biff Considers British Capital As Scene of Gene vs. Jack.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.— (UP) —London may be the site of the second heavyweight championship bout this year, Tex Rickard said today.

The promoter wired John Chapman, general manager of Madison Square Garden, to leave for London and look over the field for holding a title bout there this fall.

Sends Wire From Florida.

"John, get ready to leave for London to look over the situation there on my return to New York," Rickard wired from Miami Beach, Fla., where he is vacationing with Gene Tunney.

Rickard will return to New York Febr. 24, but Chapman will be unable to leave for London until March 15, because of his part in promoting the next six-day bike race, which will be held March 3-10.

Wembley stadium, seating more than 200,000 is under consideration as a possible site.

The stadium is just outside of London.

Shifting the Smoke.

INEW YORK, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—London, staid, old fog-bound London, peered out from the murk of the annual heavyweight smoke-up today as a possible site of the September bout for the championship, ostensibly between Tunney and Dempsey.

This much, anyhow, was strongly intimated in a wire from Tex Rickard at Miami Beach, ordering his assistant general manager, John M. Chapman, to take an early boat to England "to look over the situation there." If a favorable report were rendered and Rickard actually carried his prize across the Atlantic, it would afford Europe its first view of a heavyweight championship since Charley Mitchell and John L. battled it out at Chantilly, France, in the latter '80s.

Right to the Point.

Rickard's message to Chapman was terse, but to the point: "Get ready to leave for London to look over situation there upon my return to New York."

In brief, the proposed trans-Atlantic journey for the big fight is not an actual promise at this time. It is only a threat. Still, the boys around the Garden were taking Rickard at his word today.

Chapman declared that he would be ready to sail on March 15, after managing the details of the six-day bicycle race scheduled for the Garden during the week of March 3-10. Rickard is due back from Miami on Feb. 24. He recently announced there that he was entertaining a "truly amazing offer" from London.

HUSKERS BOW TO SOONER AGGIES

Nebraska Trailing From Tipoff and Lost Cage Game, 32-21.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Oklahoma Aggies defeated Nebraska, 32 to 21, at the coliseum Saturday night in a rough and tumble basketball game. The Stillwater Agriculturists outweighed and outranged the Nebraska five, flashing a fast scoring machine that proved effective for following-in efforts at close range.

The Sooner Farmers did most of their scoring in the first half. A basket and two free throws by King put the Aggies in front, 4-0, at the start of the game and they were never headed, being in front, 22 to 10, when the half ended.

Busy Calling Fouls.

The officials, Brown and Egan, were busy slapping fouls on the Nebraska quintet during the first half, calling 10 penalties to three on the Farmers. The Aggies flashed a keen basket eye from the foul line, gathering eight points by the charity route during the opening period.

King was the elusive forward that spiked the Nebraska guns. He broke loose for four field goals and three free throws, counting nine points during the first half.

Witte Sets Husker Pace.

Witte, with six points, led the scoring for the Cornhuskers, the "Dutchman" breaking into the game after Othmer had been retired on four personal fouls. Holm continued to play a fine guarding game, continually balking the Aggie scoring machine, although the front line had a height advantage over him.

After the first 10 minutes of play, the Aggies maintained a safe margin. After the Huskers had crowded to 8-10 of the Aggie total, the Farmers pulled away, with King, McCoy and King scoring from the floor. The Cornhuskers made a bid for a victory at the start of the second half and edged up to within seven Coliseum Proves Worth to Cornhusker Athletics.

An innovation in Cornhusker athletics was introduced last week in mural carnival at the coliseum.

The event disclosed that the coliseum is ideal for the handling of an indoor track meet or any large athletic exhibition. The picture shows the straightaway for hurdles or sprints, the one lap oval for the longer distances, the boxing ring, jumping layout and stage on which a basketball game could be in progress while the track events were being staged.

In the coliseum it is possible to run off at the same time, two basket ball games, boxing and wrestling bouts, a sprint and two field events.

LINCOLN PULLED OFF HIGH PERCH

Capital City, Stripped of Veterans, Forced to Gulp Defeats.

Crete and Tech Slated Perform This Week On Local Court.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

When tournament - time rolls around in Nebraska high school circles, the label of tourney favorite hardly can be attached to Lincoln high school, 1927 champion in Cornhusker prep circles. The Red and Black tossers of Lincoln high stripped of veteran material, have taken the short end of the count in four games this winter and the outlook suggests that the capital city cagers may take additional trimmings before the pre-tournament season is concluded.

Crete, Omaha Tech, University Place and Grand Island have measured Coach W. H. Browne's capital city aggregation this season. Two of the quartet that defeated Lincoln will play return games at Irving Junior this week and the Red and Black will be put to a strenuous test.

Crete and Tech Here.

The fast Crete team will put in a Friday appearance in Lincoln and Omaha Tech will follow Saturday night.

The week promises plenty of activity in Mid-State league circles. Grand Island and York will hit the road for games at Beatrice and Fairbury. Hastings and Kearney, a pair of leading aggregations, meet at Kearney in an important game. Columbus entertains North Platte and Fremont travels to Plattsmouth for a pair of important outside games.

Randolph at Norfolk.

Northwest Nebraska fans will have a thriller when Randolph plays at Norfolk Friday night. Coach Don Snygg's Randolph team has yet to meet defeat, while Havelock has been the only team to edge out Coach Don Harshbarger's Norfolk squad.

Western conference fans are also in for plenty of excitement. Alliance invades Gering for a feature tussle, while Mitchell will perform at Morrill and Sidney will attempt

Brass Tacks by Cy Sherman

Taking to the Air.
Wanted: A Director.
Speaking of Saps.
Chin Socker Tumbles.

Efforts of the athletic authorities at the University of Nebraska to use a soft pedal and otherwise keep secret their negotiations for a football game with the Army undoubtedly had a commendable purpose. The folks at the Husker school had a wholesome desire to land the game, said desire being inspired by the hope that the Soldiers, next year or some other season, may be willing to reciprocate by scheduling the Army eleven to perform in Lincoln. The possibilities of such a combat, staged on Nebraska sod, are tremendous, both as a pulling card and as a means of adding to Cornhusker prestige in the realm of college sport.

Aversion of the Husker officials to talking out of turn presumably was due to a belief that the smart thing for Nebraska to do was to get the game first, not stepping up to the microphone until after the arrangement actually was in the bag. The Army authorities, quite naturally, expected silence on Nebraska's part and Cornhusker heads were anxious to meet the eastern folks half-way.

But the actual happenings were tragic, with a sprinking of humor to flavor the dish. A member of the Nebraska athletic board, strolling from the campus as far as Omaha, had a few secrets in his possession and was quite unable to resist the temptation to "get on he air." When his discourse was concluded, the Nebraska end of the negotiations was completely exposed to popular gaze; the Cornhusker authorities had shown all their cards, like grandpa with the smear of gravy on his vest.

Disposition, expressed on the campus, to prod the effervescent board member—to put him in his place—misses the point. The real weakness at Nebraska is its present system of supervising and controlling Cornhusker activities through a board of several members—a general plan that is hopelessly "wet."

It should be said, in defense of the board, that it realizes and recognizes its own inabilities and weaknesses, wherefore the members have gone on record in favor of a system which will concentrate all responsibilities of control and direction of Husker athletics in a single head.

Acting on that idea, the board right now is in the market for the services of a director who shall have complete charge of all athletic activities at the university. No official word has filtered from Cornhusker headquarters as to the success of the board in its search for a general director, but with members "popping off" and broadcasting Husker secrets, surely the board will bestir itself and pursue with new energy its quest for the man to fit Nebraska's job.

Tex Rickard's "joke of the century," his discovery that Jack Dempsey has gone into temporary seclusion to nurse a sore eye, has Gotham fight scribes gasping in wonderment at the promoter's nerve. But the confusion Tex has tossed into New York's newspaper row is not important. Tex knows that the saps will be up there storming the box office, regardless of how thick or how frequently he spreads his bunk.

Speaking of saps, brings to mind the Gotham fight crowd which recently witnessed Ace Hudkins, our own "Nebraska Wildcat," manhandle Lew Tendler in a New York ring. Although Ace gave the veteran Philadelphia southpaw a smart mauling in virtually every round and had the old-timer sprawling and several times on the verge of a knockout, the saps reserved their "booes" for Ace—the one fellow of the pair in the ring who had given them their money's worth.

Once in a while, at least, there bobs to the surface an exponent of the refined art of socking chins and mauling ears who is truly wise. Special reference in this case directs attention to Roscoe Hall, most proficient lightweight fighter in the Hawkeye state. Roscoe has been slinging padded gloves with frequent regularity the past four years, winning more than his share of the verdicts and qualifying for his portion of the financial spoils.

But Roscoe recently paused, took stock, balanced his accounts and discovered that four years of ring battling had brought him little or nothing in the way of financial gain. Wherefore, Roscoe tossed his ring togs into the family ashcan and beat it back to college to resume the course in medicine he dropped when he took to whirling gloves.

Roscoe will be a physician some day, a respected member of society, whereas most of the present crop of knuckle shovers will be busted in purse, broken in body and goofy upstairs. Can anyone seriously question that the Iowa boy has made the wise choice?

HASTINGS STOPS DOANE'S TIGERS

2 Extra Periods Before Bronchos Win, 23-19 Over Bengals.

Haylett Squad In First Conference Reverse of Season.

HASTINGS, Neb., Feb. 4—In the bitterest fought game of the conference season which was marked by two extra periods, the Hastings Broncos defeated the Doane Tigers here tonight, 23 to 19.

With score standing 4 to 4 at the half both teams returned to the floor with the fighting spirit which carried them through to a tie at 16 to 16 at the end of the regular playing period.

Hastings had Doane down 16-12 with only two minutes to play when France, center, looped to long shots to knot the score for the fourth time of the game.

Both Teams on Edge.

Field goals by Bassett and France tied the score again in the first extra period, but in the second extra period the Broncos located the hoop with precision and Bruntz, short shot cinched the battle. Bruntz then made a free toss and McCrady finished off with two more free tosses.

The closeness of the guarding caused the removal of Sanderson and Spielman from the Doane lineup. Their absence did not slow up the battle. The largest crowd of

TECH HIGH BAGS ONE-POINT EDGE

Drummond Quint Victor, 12-11; Crete Is Given First Defeat.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 4—Coach "Pop" Klein's Crete high basket tossers met their first reversal of the season at the hands of Omaha Tech here Saturday night by a score of 12 to 11 in an over-time tussle. The game was a most peculiar one, Coach Drummond's quintet electing to stall from the opening whistle.

Two long shots by Worthing opposed to a free throw by Aller gave Tech a 4 to 1 lead at the half. The Maroons continued to stall in the third quarter, after Murray had given them a 6 to 1 advantage, and it was 22 minutes before Stone gave Crete its first field goal.

Crete rallied and swept into a 10 to 8 lead, but Worthing tied the count in the last minute and in the extra period. Weiner tallied on a long heave, while Crete was held to Hokuf's free throw in two attempts. The score:

Husker State In Sport Spotlight

Athletes of Hudkins-Weir-Locke Type Potent Factors In Earning for Nebraska Place In Sun.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 — (I. N. S.) — "Yes," said the lioness, "but it's a lion," when asked by the fox if it was true that she spawned only one cub.

That also seems to be the case of the sovereign state of Nebraska. It may not breed as many athletes as the more thickly populated centers, like New York and California, but most of its products are good and it really is surprising how many of them are national stand-outs or maybe it is stands-out, as long as you have my guard down.

Roll of Great Nebraskans.

Offhand, the names of Joe Stecher, Ed Weir, Glenn Presnell, Ace Hudkins, Lloyd Hahn, Roland Locke, Fait Elkins and the two Munns, Monte and Wayne, come to mind as examples of Nebraska contributions to our national sport history. Such a volume, in fact, hardly would be complete without these names and, if Cy Sherman, the Lincoln oracle, didn't write it, even these would fail to endow it with complete adequacy.

For more than thirty years, man and boy, Cy has seen them come and go on the plains of his native heath and, with pardonable pride through strict impartiality, he has recorded the happenings for Cornhusker posterity. He saw Joe Stecher become the world's greatest wrestler with his deadly scissors. He watched Ed Weir develop into the greatest football tackle of history, saw Stiner become an acceptable successor and Glenn Presnell come along to national greatness as a backfield man last year.

Paddock Off Front Page.

Gazing pensively but alertly from the press stand, he watched Locke race to record after record in the sprints several years ago and take the play away from Charley Paddock. The Munns likewise went forth to national consideration under his benign gaze and last year he was there when Fait Elkins, the noble redman, broke the American record for the decathlon.

Therefore, when Mr. Sherman cares to elaborate a bit on the subject of a Nebraska product, one may do well to lend an attentive ear. His discourse, addressed to the writer, deals with the matter of Ace Hudkins, who apparently is enroute to the world's welterweight championship.

Bat Nelson No. 2.

It throws an interesting light upon the character of this Neanderthal man, who is the Battling Nelson of his time. Mr. Sherman's epistle concludes with some information about Locke and Elkins, by way of emphasis and for good measure.

"The Hudkins boys," he writes, "told me that Sammy Baker has no stomach for another whirl at Ace; that he goes muttering into the night at the mention of this 'wildcat' fellow. A terrific body beating, says Brother Art Hudkins, cured Sammy of the desire to again take on the wildcat.

A Busy Fighter.

"This Hudkins boy was a busy alley fighter while growing up as a kid in Lincoln. Later, he took to the rasseling thing in Y. M. C. A. circles, but the battle lust was in his blood and I saw him wear padded mittens in his first professional engagement, in which he lost the decision in a four-round preliminary.

"The boy has one fine thing to his credit, to-wit: He takes good care of his mother, having bought and established her in a new home in one of Lincoln's latest residence additions, and she is taking life easy and enjoying the comforts that the boy's money will buy.

Bundle of Energy.

"Ace is a bundle of tremendous energy when he lets loose in a ring. He generally takes two or three to sock once, but that once lugs a heap of power and punishment. I shall be surprised if he does not climb

Lincoln Boys Glove Victors.

Left—Bob Conneily. Right—Harold Mathews.

Two Lincoln youth—Bob Connelly and Harold Mathews—came home with gold medal honors from the recent state A. A. U. amateur boxing tournament in Omaha. Connelly captured first laurels in the 135-pound lightweight class and Mathews was victorious in the ranks of the 118-pound bantams. Connelly participated in two bouts, winning both by decisions, while Mathews wore padded mitts in three battles and stopped his opponent in every bout. The two Lincoln youngsters will swing gloves in a senior A. A. U. tournament in Omaha next April, an event which will be rated as tryouts for the American Olympic boxing team.

BROTHER ANTON TALKS FOR JOE

Stecher's Pilot Asserts Scissors Expert "In the Pink."

Nebraskan Rounding Out Training for Strangler At East St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 4—Joe Stecher, Nebraska scissors marvel, who will battle Strangler Ed Lewis of Kentucky for the world's heavyweight championship wrestling title the night of Feb. 20 in this city, has concluded a six weeks' course of intensive training on his Nebraska farm and arrived here today for the tapering off of his preparatory drill. Joe has established his camp across the river in East St. Louis.

Anton Stecher, the grappler's brother and business manager, announced his acceptance of an invitation issued by Mayor Doyle and the Chamber of Commerce to pitch the camp on the east side. They have selected the pretentious new Broadview hotel as their headquarters.

Stecher "In Pink."

Anton Stecher declares his brother is in the finest physical trim of his wrestling career and he confidently predicts that Joe will take Lewis into camp with two quick and decisive falls. If Lewis depends upon his famous headlock to beat Stecher, the "Strangler" is doomed to bitter disappointment, in the opinion of Brother Anton, who declares the Nebraskan has perfected an impregnable defense against the cranial twister as a result of three weeks of daily practice workouts with a squad of five headlock artists.

Reports from Lewis' training camp at Kansas City indicate that the "Strangler" is devoting much of his time these days to the perfection of a defense against the body scissors hold, Stecher's pet squeezer, and that most of his recent training bouts were with Marin Plestina, the Jugo-Slav giant, who is an expert with the scissors and variations of this crushing leverage.

Scored a Basket On Bouncing Pass

Here's one for the book: During the basket game with Avoca high at Syracuse last week, Andrews, red-haired Syracuse forward, was being rushed under his own goal. He could not shoot, but, rather than get a held ball, he tried a bounce pass in the hope that a team-mate would recover the ball. The oval had so much "English" that it bounced into the basket without touching the rim of the hoop. Syracuse won the game, 42 to 19.

'TEX' SHIFTS PLANS; PICKS ON LONDON

landed at Southhampton yesterday and it is presumed that he communicated with Rickard upon his arrival, the result being Rickard's order to Chapman.

If the boys are leveling about this thing, London will be the scene of the bout. London can furnish seats for 200,000, at least, it is said.

New York Crossed Off.

One thing is definitely settled, however, New York is "out" as far as the September championship is concerned. It will get the class AA affair that Tunney insisted upon for June, but if and when Dempsey comes back—the understanding is he certainly will—New York will be out of the picture.

The first two episodes of this thriller are now history.

Conflicting stories are in circulation concerning the possibility of Chicago landing the fight. It seems to have been taken for granted that the September bout will be fouht within sight of the bosom of Lake Michigan.

Jack Sour On Chicago.

But a close personal friend of and a professional adviser to Jack Dempsey informs me that the boy friend is dead set against fighting in Chicago again after what happened in the seventh round there last fall. In addition, I have the word of Gene Tunney that this sentiment is mutual; to be precise, that "Chicago doesn't want Dempsey."

There is, however, one feature in connection with both Chicago and Philadelphia to which no resounding objection will be echoed by anybody. This is that both cities can guarantee a superfluity of saps who will buy the tickets that are hardest to sell, towit: Those ranging between $5 to $30.

Cheaper Seats Tell Tale.

Any smart boxing man will tell that you put your show over or don't according to the number of cheaper seats you sell. The price of ringside seats is determined by how much you think of the cheaper seats.

One might ask, "Why London for such a fight?" It seems possible that if you try to charge the English working man what he thinks he can't afford to pay he is libale to stay away in droves.

There is, as a matter of fact, only one thing certain about any statement that is made in February concerning a heavyweight match in September. This is that there is nothing certoin about it.

'Commy' and 'Ban' Parties to Feud

That a personal feud exists between Byron Bancroft Johnson, until recently president of the American league, and Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, is a fact generally accepted by American baseball fans. But, that the feud, which nearly precipitated a baseball war, apparently started because of a practical joke played on Johnson is not so well known and is pointed out by Hugh Fullerton in an article in this week's issue of Liberty Magazine.

According to Fullerton, it seems that Johnson, who was a guest at Comiskey's hunting camp some years ago, had bought a new gun, which he displayed with considerable pride. Some of the boys, sensing a chance for a good joke, placed blank cartridges in his amunition vest.

Put Blame On Comiskey.

Johnson did not discover the joke until he had given a dismal hunting exhibition and had endured the steady riding of the jokers. But later, when he did find out, he was furious and blamed Comiskey. All explanations made by members of the party to smooth over the matter failed and Johnson left for home.

"Friends brought them together again," writes Fullerton, but he tells of the breach which, instead of healing, grew wider and wider. "Each," continues the author, "construed everything the other did in its worst possible light.

"The feud had reached bitter proportions when, suddenly, after the world's series of 1919, the famous Black Sox' scandal broke. One sad feature of that scandal was that, had Johnson and Comiskey been friends, it never could have happened."

Molla Still Good In Racquet Game

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Molla Mallory, national singles champion many times over, won the final of the Heights Casino invitation tennis tournament this afternoon by disposing of Miss Eleanor Goss, national ranking player, in straight sets. The scores were 6-4, 6-0, Miss Goss' game collapsing in the final set under the steady, relentless pounding of Mrs. Mallory's strokes.

Molla took an early lead at 3-2 in the first set, but the sixth game saw Miss Goss make her bid to overhaul the Norse woman. Miss Goss went out to a lead of 40-love of service in this game and seemed destined to tie the score. But Molla rallied, carried the points to deuce and ultimately won the game. The rest of the way was a parade of points for Molla.

Officials Fail to Please.

If games similar to the Saturday night exhibition are to be repeated on Valley courts, then the writer suggests that football togs be passed out to the players. While the boys are in the sotreroom looking up the gridiron equipment, conference authorities might also devise some system of obtaining competent officials. Some officials on the circuit annually find difficulty in working at the coliseum, yet these same arbiters seem to be with us each season. The score:

to the peak of the welterweight heap.

"Roland Locke, former University of Nebraska sprinter, and Fait 'Chief' Elkins, Indian student at the university here who won the decathlon at the A. A. U. national meet last July in Lincoln, will be showing up in New York soon to start training for the Olympic team. I understand that both have arranged to get employment there. Both have undergone recent tonsil operations and they may take to the training business slowly, but if Locke ever regains his sprinting form of the spring of 1926, he'll be a great addition to the U. S. Olympic team.

A Remarkable Furlong.

"It may impress you as being quite incredible, but it nevertheless is the fact that I saw Locke run the last furlong of a half-mile relay race in under 20 seconds. That was the day he lowered the world's record for the 220-yard dash.

"Time only can decide if Locke regains his running form and physical condition of two years ago but if the breaks are in his favor I predict he will be showing the east a marvelous pair of heels this coming spring and summer season."

[Editor's Note: Locke's remarkable time for the furlong, mentioned above, was recorded in a half-mile relay on the Nebraska stadium track, in which event he had the advantage of a running start. Rev. Father O'Connor of Havelock, who held the watch on Locke, is authority for the statement that the "Cornhusker Comet" covered the 220 yards in less than 20 seconds.]

CHEER FOR EVERYONE.

Basketball is one sport at least in which every fan gets an opportunity to get rid of a cheer at some time or other during the season. There are few basketball teams that fail to win at least one game during the campaign and, correspondingly, there are few squads that do not rise to sufficient heights during the season to cause the oldtimers to throw out their chests and exchange reminiscences.

For example, witness the Nebraska Cornhuskers. Veteran material was lacking in the Scarlet and Cream camp this fall and tage fans in touch with the situation were resigned to a rather drab winter in the basket pastime. And then along came the Missouri game. The Tigers, rated as one of the two best teams in the Valley conference, had given the Cornhuskers a sound thrashing at Columbia and were booked to duplicate the performance at Lincoln. It is a matter of history that the much-abused Nebraska team was ahead 25-4 at halftime and won the game in an easy fashion, 36-26.

ONE COACH'S ADVICE.

A number of years back, the writer was helping cover the big state high school basketball tournament. Becoming rather tired watching the lower class games at the Y. M. C. A., he strolled down into the dressing room.

A coach from one of the smaller schools was in one corner of the locker room, surrounded by his players. The team had just left the floor at the end of the half with the score against them. While the boys listened for wise words from their coach, the mentor spilled the following information:

"Boys, what we need is more baskets."

While the coach was somewhat careless in not letting his boys in on the secret of how to get these baskets, he nevertheless hit the nail on the head when he said "what his team needed was more points."

"Hot streaks" are more frequent in basketball than any other sport, hence the upsets that are a weekly feature in nearly every conference race. A team may bombard the hoop all evening, but unless the ball swishes through the webb netting, it is all for naught.

READ YOUR OWN DOPE.

The "in and out" trend of basketball scores enables the fan to mix his own dope to a surprisingly satisfactory result.

For example, the scorebooks show a string of figures that should cause College View high rooters to grab their megaphones and get busy.

Hastings beat Omaha Tech by one point.

York beat Hastings by 18 points.

Havelock beat York by eleven points.

Wesleyan Prep beat Havelock by two points.

College View defeated Wesleyan Prep by one point.

Therefore, ladies and gentlemen, College View can claim its team is better than Omaha Tech.

But wait, here's another angle. The Lincoln Reserves beat College View rather decisively and since Omaha Tech trimmed Lincoln, we may infer that Coach W. H. Browne's second string is highly superior to his first outfit.

CHAPPELL WINS IN WESTERN CIRCLES

CHAPPELL, Neb., Feb. 4—Chappell high school has been making a fine showing in western Nebraska basketball circles this season.

zThe Chappell team, coached by E. O. Cochran, has won two games and lost one start in the South Platte Valley association and captured the first three contests in the Western Nebraska conference.

Trojan Star Barred; Flunks In Studies

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 4—(I. N. S.)—Don Moses, star sophomore fullback on the University of Southern California football squad, will be ineligible to play next season, it was announced today by Gwynn Wilson, Trojan graduate manager. Scholastic requirements are the cause of Moses' difficulty.

An all-English women's hockey team will invade the United States next autumn.

"Buddie" Aspires Wear Two Crowns

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—(U. P.)—Bud Taylor, bantamweight titleholder, believes two crowns can occupy the space his hat covers.

Taylor has his eyes and mind set on next Thursday night, when he enters the ring here with Joey Sangor, 12-pounder. A victory will give Taylor a chance to meet the victor of the Canzoneri-Bass fight in New York and the winner of the final match will be recognized as featherweight king.

HAHN EASY WINNER ON BOSTON TRACK

BOSTON, Feb. 4—(U. P.)—Lloyd Hahn, American middle distance runner, won an easy victory in the Hunter mile, feature event of the annual Boston A. C. association games at the Boston arena tonight.

His time was 4 minutes 22¾ seconds—10 4-5 seconds behind the indoor record established by Joie Ray and Paavo Nurmi in 1925.

Ray M. Conger of the Illinois A. C. came in second, a quarter of a lap behind the speedy Nebraskan. J. A. Siverk, another Illinois A. C. entry, finished third, after crowding Conger for second place.

Red and Black Revenged, 20 to 10, for Early Season Defeat.

In avenging an early season defeat, the Lincoln Reserves trounced the Wesleyan Prep aggregation by a 20 to 10 score in a contest played Saturday evening on the Wesleyan court. The outcome was not in doubt at any stage of the game, the Lincoln quintet getting the jump and proceeding to play bang up basketball from start to finish.

Coach Overman's Red and Black cagers were at their best during the second and third periods, holding a 11 to 2 advantage at the half time and a 17 to 4 lead at the end of the third canto. The Wesleyan Prep hoopsters started a desparate rally at the beginning of the last quarter and managed to bring the score up to 17 to 10, but the Lincoln basket tossers again settled down to business and bagged the victory with little or no trouble.

Sauer High Point Man.

Sauer, playing his second game of the season with the Lincoln reserves, was high point man of the fray, scoring seven points. Gillette of the victors and Smith of Wesleyan Prep both registered two field goals and a gift shot for a total of five points. Martin and Captain Winterhalter both played a steady defensive game for Lincoln, Martin also sinking two field goals.

JAYHAWKS GRAB DUAL MAT MEET

Toman and Davis Winner By Fall Route For Cornhuskers.

Nebraska opened its Missouri Valley wrestling season at the Coliseum Saturday night losing to the Kansas university grapplers, 18 to 13. Five of the seven matches resulted in falls, Kansas getting three and Nebraska two.

The meet was fast from the opening bout with the Jayhawker team taking the first two by falls and running the count up to 10 to 0. Kossowski, wrestling his first varsity match for Nebraska went down for a fall in three minutes fifty-four seconds. Cohenour won the fall by a half nelson and crotch hold.

Captain Paxon, runner up in the national A. A. U. meet at Stillwater last year won the second match by throwing Max Karrer in eight minutes thirty-seven seconds with a half nelson. Nebraska broke into the scoring column in the third match on the evening's program when Captain Earl Luff of Nebraska won the 135-pound class by decision.

Luff Wins Decision.

The Luff-Kenney match was the closest meet of the evening, going to two extra periods. In the first extra period Luff had a two minute 50 seconds advantage and the second extra stanza was all Nebraska's. By winning the 135-pound class Nebraska put the count 10 to 3 with Kansas still ahead.

Reimer, another new man on Coach Kellogg's wrestling squad lost by fall in the 145-pound class to Cox of Kansas. The match went four minutes four seconds before the Kansas man pinned Reimer to the mat by a reverse headlock and a body lock.

Toman Pins Opponent.

Nebraska won its first fall of the evening when Toman of Nebraska pinned Church to the mat in seven minutes six seconds with a body scissors and headlock.

In the 175-pound class "Chief" Davis took a fast match from Capsey of Kansas when he pinned the Jayhawker grappler to the mat in one minute and 22 seconds with a half nelson. The heavyweight class went to Kansas when Preeze won by decision over Koehntge with a time advantage of six minutes, 34 seconds.

Nebraska HORSES and HORSEMEN
by "Columbus"

E. G. McKlyo, 5, 2:11¾, by Peter McKlyo, 2:06, racing so well in 1927, was out of Emily G. Axworthy, 2, 2:20, by Morgan Axworthy, 2:17¾, a stallion that sired the handsome trotter Edgar Worthy, 2:08¾, owned at Lincoln as a two-year-old. It is well worth mentioning that Emily G. Axworthy was given her record May 12, 1915, an unusually early date for such a performance. J. B. Chandler, deceased, coming to Lincoln in 1885 and later training at David City for Morris Jones, and the first man to race Alix, 2:03¾, one time champion trotter, gave the record named to Emily G. Axworthy, which at that time was called Emily Axworthy. In order to have the filly registered, Ed Gould of Kearney, her owner, was compelled to add the letter "G."

Reference to Edgar Worthy and his ownership in Lincoln by Earl Hart, son of Gus Hart, a pioneer trainer and race driver of Nebraska, brings to mind the praise bestowed upon that two-year-old during the time he was receiving his first lesson in harness over the state fair grounds track. Even now, Edgar Worthy is referred to by enthusiastic horsemen as the handsomest colt trotter ever seen in this section of the west. That son of Morgan Axworthy gained his first 2:10 trotter during the racing season of 1927, when Leon Worthy trotted a winning mile in 2:08, a performance which easily made him the fastest three-year-old trotter of 1927 bred west of the Mississippi river. Edgar Worthy was purchased of Earl Hart by Al Derby, Wichita, Kas., at a price said to be larger than that received for any two-year-old ever bred in Nebraska. His son, Leon Worthy, sold for $5,000 last July, following his winning race at Carthage, Mo., and that is the highest price ever received for a three-year-old bred in the state of Kansas.

We are advised by the state racing commission that only colts and fillies bred in this state will be permitted to race in state events sponsored by that body. That ruling will prevent owners going outside Nebraska for colts and was intended to foster breeding and racing in this state, which was the intent of the law establishing a racing commission. There will be strong objection to that ruling, especially by men who have won colt races in this state in other years with material purchased at the Chicago sale.

In a table of money winners published in The Star of Jan. 22, appeared the trotting gelding Young Fox, 2:14½, by Ossory, 2:14 1-4, raced the past season by W. O. Reynolds, Denver, Colo., through the Pacific coast circuits. Ossory, by Constantine, 2:12½, was bred by Rev. Father Thomas Barden of Tecumseh, also breeder of Black Kilkenny, 2:14 1-4; Lover Bird, 2:20 1-4, and other trotters. When Ossory began attracting attention as a four-year-old, at which time he was raced by Al Thomas, with the King Hill Stock Farm, St. Joseph, Mo., "Columbus" stated that the young trotter was named in honor of an old Irish Kingdom. We were led to that conclusion after reading a book dealing with the Kings of Ireland. Col. John Donovan, proprietor of the King Hill Stock Farm and afterwards owner of Ossory, thought differently, but Father Barden confirmed our guess.

And, by the way, Ossory was bought back by Father Barden at the King Hill Stock Farm dispersal sale in 1912 and sold by him during the summer of 1914 for export to Europe. The horse never reached Europe, as the vessel he was shipped on was one of the first destroyed by German submarines after war was declared in August, 1914.

The observations found in the preceding item lead one to another rather interesting development, which is that a number of churchmen have contributed their quota to the improvement of the light harness horse. In Nebraska, several well known preachers and priests have bred and owned high-class trotters and pacers. Rev. P. Mathuska, formerly of Plymouth, Neb., was for years a breeder of light harness horses, sending his mares to high class stallions, often to such stallions owned in other states.

The good trotter Cochran, 2:12¾, by Col. Cochran, 2:10¾, was owned during his racing years by a Lutheran minister residing at Davey, Neb. Father McDonald, living at Hastings many years and dying only a few years ago, was greatly interested in the trotting-bred horse. The pacing gelding Father Mac, 2:15¾, by Gomoka, p. 2:10, trained and raced by Billy Stantz of Lincoln, was bred by him.

The only resident of Kansas to breed two trotters with records faster than 2:10 is Rev. J. W. Thompson of Dodge City, a veteran Presbyterian minister. In addition, Mr. Thompson bred numerous other trotters. One of them, Doc Win T., 2:11¾, raced last season at Nebraska meetings.

Men in all ranks of business and professions have contributed their share to the improvement of the American "Horse of Pleasure," and that includes pacers, runners, saddle horses and trotters. George Washington, our first president, bred horses with speed and that was also true of Henry Clay, brilliant statesman from Kentucky. John Randolph of Roanoke, a patriot and statesman, dearly loved the blooded horse, as did Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory."

Gen. Grant was a lover of the trotter and Commodore Vanderbilt was a fearless driver in his day and generation, while his son, William, owned and raced many noted trotters. Nathan Strauss, named by Theodore Roosevelt as America's most useful citizen, has owned many high class trotters. Leland Stanford, governor of California and later U. S. senator from that state, operated one of the largest and most successful breeding establishments in America.

Here in Nebraska successful men have bred and owned both trotters and pacers. Among successful financiers breeding and owning trotters during their lifetime may be mentioned Tom Auld, W. O. Southwick, J. D. Creighton, O. P. Shallenberger, Wood Cones, Charles Boggs, Mr. Kesterson of Fairbury, Charles Beaumont, Frank Strahan and others whose names are not recalled at this writing.

Attorneys, merchants, physicians, realtors and other men of affairs in Nebraska have contributed their bit to making this state famous as a center of breeding the trotter and pacer. Not only have men, successful in their various callings or business associations, been identified with the breeding of light harness horses, but women of high rank in society have demonstrated their ability as breeders and owners.

Once upon a time the writer prepared and published a list of American women who bred one or more trotters with records of 2:30 or better, and that list carried the names of more than a hundred women. The greatest, or one of the greatest, stable of thoroughbred horses in America is owned by Mrs. Whitney of New York City, with Thomas Murphy head trainer. And so it has gone from the very beginning of real living in America; the best, biggest and brainiest men of the nation have been, and still are, interested in the "Horse of Pleasure."

WESLEYAN LOSES FINALE OF TRIP

Nebraska Methodists On Short End of Clash With Simpson.

INLIANOLA, Ia., Feb. 4—Simpson beat Nebraska Wesleyan in the visitors' third Iowa game here tonight, winning by a 38 to 28 score. The game was fast, with Simpson leading almost throughout. At one time in the first half, Nebraska Wesleyan came from behind to tie the score at 7-7. The first half ended Simpson 9, Nebraska Wesleyan 7.

Simpson on by virtue of superior offensive tactics. Garbett was the leading offensive star of the Iowans with nine field goals.

Simpson used a three-man offensive, sending C. Flanagan, Kirkpatrick and Garbett down the floor to handle the shooting end, while the guards remained in the rear.

The visitors' five-man defense was unable to withstand the charges of the Garbett and his partners and the latter shot frequently and almost at will during the second half.

Calvert, forward, starred for Nebraska Wesleyan on offense, while Loder led the Methodists in defensive playing. The score:

WAS FURNISHED BY THE SUPPLY DIVISION OF THE Nebraska Buick Automobile Co.

Equip your shop with a Jumbo Giant Brake Tester which—

1—Tests net braking results with precise accuracy under conditions similar to road service and including retarding effect of the weight of the car.

2—Assures the motorist that the adjustment of his brakes is absolutely right and dependable.

3—Enables the driver of a Jumbo Giant Brake Tested car to estimate closely the distance required to come to a full stop under all conditions of speed and road.

4—Shows the car owner or driver the exact condition of all brakes. He can see for himself and the evidence is beyond dispute.

5—One motor for each pair of wheels enables the adjuster to set brakes on both sides of a car exactly alike, removing one of the greatest causes of skidding.

6—Multiplies the number of brake tests that can be made in a day, eliminates the time and expense of road tests and takes all the "guess" out of brake adjustment.

LINCOLN STAR Classified Advertising

The Lincoln Star is a member of The Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers which includes leading newspapers throughout the country, and has for its aim the elimination of fraudulent and misleading classified advertising. The Lincoln Star, as well as every other member of the association, endeavors to print only truthful Want Ads and will appreciate having its attention called to any advertisement not conforming to the highest standard of honesty.

Ads ordered for seven times and stopped before expiration will be charged for only the number of times the ad appeared and adjustment made at the rate earned.

Careful attention given to mail orders.

Cash in full must accompany out-of-town advertisement.

Advertising offered for irregular insertion takes the one time rate. No ad is taken for less than a basis of three lines. All ads are restricted to their proper classifications and to the regular Lincoln Star style of type. The publishers reserve the right to edit or reject any classified advertising copy.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INFORMATION.

Errors in advertisement should be reported immediately. The Star will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion.

The individual advertisements under the following classifications are arranged in ALPHABETICAL order for quick reference.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING RATES.

Daily rate for consecutive insertions. Count six average words to a line. These special cash rates apply to advertising paid for within seven days after last insertion. Minimum cash rate is 36 cents. Cash rate per line per day:

1 Time	.10
3 Times	.10
7 Times	.09

These offices are open to receive advertisements from 7:00 a. m. to 10:00 p. m. daily. All advertisements received up until 12:30 p. m. will appear in all city editions the same day. All ads received between 12:30 p. m. and 10:00 p. m. will appear in all editions the following day.

Sunday copy must be in office before 9:30 p. m. Saturday.

GUARANTEED USED CARS—

IMITATION—Is the sincerest form of flattery. The success of our slogan "Guaranteed Used Cars" has been so strikingly manifest in motor car circles that, quite naturally it has resulted in several imitations. Purchasing a used car today is not a "Cat in a Bag" proposition, but a legitimate business transaction in which the big, outstanding factor always should be—"Value received." Investigate the "Auto Exchange Co." before purchasing that automobile.

BRITISH CHAMP SOFT FOR JEFF

Husky Yank Fiddled For Three Rounds; Then Let Scales Have It.

Record books dealing wih Jim Jeffries career as a ringster fail to note the battle in which he clinched his claim as heavyweight champion of the world by spanking a British title-holder into submission in a burlesque bout.

After Jeff won the crown from Bob Fitzsimmons, in 1899, he went to Europe on an exhibition tour under guidance of William A. Brady, his manager, and Jeff bounded into England just at a time when Jack Scales, a 175-pounder, was acclaiming himself "champion of Europe."

Jeff needed sparring partners when he reached London and Brady made the announcement through the newspapers. The next day none other than Scales, the champion, was among the applicants for a job.

"But," explained Brady, "the pay is only four pounds ($20) a week."

Jeff's Sparring Partner.

"Suits me," answered Scales. He was hired immediately. Jeff and Scales boxed together in and around London, with Jeff always careful to pull his punches.

Eventually, Jeff left for France to box a fellow there for the la savate championship. That style of boxing permitted a man to use his feet as well as his fists. But the French champion got a look at Jeff as he climbed off the boat—and that was enough. There was no such fight.

The disappointed French promoter tried to find a Frenchman who would box Jeff—but without luck. Then John S. Barnes said to him:

"Why not get Scales, the English champion, to fight Mr. Jeffries?"

Barnes, at the time, was in charge of the tour, due to the absence of Brady.

Spreading the Bunk.

"Can you get him?" asked the promoter. "If so, I will pay Mr. Jeffries 50 per cent of the gross receipts and also will pay Mr. Scales, if his demands are not too great."

Barnes cabled Scales, who replied he would meet Jeff for $20 and expenses. Barnes replied "Hurry along." And then, in the hope of attracting a big crowd that would mean plenty of money for Jeff on the 50 per cent basis, the canny Barnes proceeded to tell Parisian newspapermen fanciful tales about Scales.

He informed them that Scales was a collegian studying for the ministry, but that he quit college to become a fighter; told them that Scales didn't drink, smoke, swear or chew—oh, he told 'em a lot about Scales. And a huge crowd turned out for the fight.

Jeff Forgot His Place.

Jeff promised Scales that he'd be nice and careful with him. He was for two rounds. In the third, one of Jeff's left jabs started too near the nose of Scales and when it hit, there was a crimson flow—and Scales, becoming annoyed, called Jeff a lot of names.

The sight of blood had made the crowd want to see more. It yelled to Jeff to get busy. And, all the while, Scales was cussing Jeff. So Jeff, to oblige the crowd and to repay Scales a little, began to warm up. A mild left to the body dropped the puzzled Scales. A short left to the chin did likewise. And then Jeff teased Scales' nose with a couple of jabs and followed with a short left for the body. The punch drove Scales to the ropes. He clung there until he had recovered his breath, then he turned, faced the crowd and yelled:

"'Es too bally big for me, loidies and gentlemen and 'es too rough and I retire now and give this bally H'American the championship of Hingland."

Believes In Studebaker.

Mr. Holt, his daughter and his two Studebakers and (in oval) his Studebaker-powered motorboat.

For his personal transportation, L. B. Holt of Laconia, New Hampshire, relies on Studebaker 100 per cent. In his garage are two Studebaker cars, The President and a Big Six Club Sedan.

And, whenever Mr. Holt seeks a change, he plows a few furrows on the lakes near his home with his 40 foot speedster—which is also powered by a Studebaker Big Six motor.

MRS. YATES IS WINNING FAVOR BY ART WORK

longer a luxury for only the wealthy. With traffic conditions steadily growing more confusing, the business man to whom every moment is calculated in dollars and cents, finds it a great advantage to be able to distinguish his car without loss of time."

Mrs. Yates is not only an efficient business woman and a well-known artist but she is the most charming of hostesses at her home on Governor's island where Colonel Yates is stationed. She travels each day to Manhatten and is busy from early morn to late at night on portrait plaques, her increasingly popular automounts or dainty door stops which are her latest creation for children's bedrooms.

Answering a query as to whether art for art's sake was all that artists in America live for, her answer was an emphatic negative. "The high cost of living," she maintains," has made it necessary for many of the finest sculptors to turn to commercial work. Sculpturing is frightfully expensive work and sculptors need lots of money to get before the public. In Europe artists will live on bread and water for art's sake, but conditions are different here. If we don't turn to commercial art, we are never heard of and though none of us really like it there seem to be no alternative."

The speaker said that it has been established beyond a doubt, that the habit of Sabbath observance has been practiced since the earliest times, originating among the tribes when still in nomadic state. The Sabbath grew gradually from an ethical institution to a religious one, among the early Hebrews taking on a humanitarian aspect mercifully granting a day of rest to the enslaved of other tribes. After the exile the Sabbath grew into a central institution about which Judaism was centered. After the exile there grew up two types of sacrifice. First the gift to the Deity by which the people gave of their sacrifice the choice portions reserved for the special offering. Second, the sacrificial meal, in which form of sacrifice, the Deity was given the first part of each portion of either food or drink.

ROMANTICISM AND REALISM EXPLAINED.

The literature department of the Woman's club met in Faculty hall, Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. C. E. Burton presiding. Poets of the romantic movement were discussed by Prof. Wilcox. He defined the difference between romanticism and realism. He said every child is a romanticist; he loves color for color's sake; sound for its own sake; and fresh air naturally.

At the same time Longfellow, Lowell and Whittier were romanticists in this country, Browning, Shelley and Wordsworth were writing in England. It was a universal period of romanticism. Longfellow is a household word in this country and will be for the next thousand years because romance is the best form of literature for America. We should be very thankful for Longfellow as serious minded, ambitious, strenuous working Americans need him to lighten up the evenings after a hard day's work. Europeans take life easy, quit work about the middle of the afternoon, have tea and visit for hours. When evening comes they are refrshed and ready for heavy reading. Hence they prefer realists. Tolstoy was a realist and will never be as popular in America as he is in Europe. Tennyson was the most sentimental poet of the world and disliked Longfellow. Edgar Guest is the most popular poet of this country today.

DECORATIVE STYLES DISCUSSED BY KIRSCH.

As an introduction to the study of the decorations of the period styles of architecture, Dwight Kirsch of the university school of fine arts in his lecture before the art department of the Lincoln Womans club Friday afternoon, traced the development of house furnishings and decorations from the earliest known dwellings, the caves and tents of primitive people to the present time. The development of wall decorations and the use of color was traced from the first simple patterns of geometric lines through to the depiction of plant and animal life and later to religictus symbols.

The Egyptians left the first definite decorations and some of their work has never been surpassed. The Assyrian and Babylonian civilization introduced the use of glazed tile in decoration. Mr. Kirsch described his visit to Pompeii and the architecture and decoration of its buildings. The Gothic period introduced the first tapestries, which were used to cover the bare stone walls. During the Renaissance the homes of the average citizens showed an improvement in the furniture and decoration.

The Italian Period will be discussed at the next meeting, February 17.

400 Social Leaders select this Coffee for its Matchless Flavor

In representative cities and towns of this section we asked 400 leaders of society what coffee they used for their social functions and for home use. A great majority chose Butter-Nut over any other. . . . Score another victory for Butter-Nut!

We also asked them in what respect Butter-Nut seemed superior. "In its matchless flavor", they replied. "Delicious strength, richness, mellowness, more cups per pound."

And so it is—the very reasons given at the cottage in the valley for their choice of Butter-Nut are the same as those given at the mansion on the hill. All the world loves Butter-Nut flavor.

Such popularity marks this rare blend as worthy of your own home. You should try it.

Riding Becoming Popular Sport in Lincoln And Many Persons Are Buying Saddle Horses

Perhaps it is a borrowed interest from our neighbor city, Omaha, whose bridle paths are always filled with devotees of the sport, or the mild winter may have had some part in it, but this year a great many of Lincoln's horse-lovers have purchased horses for their own use.

Young and old alike are riding, and good or bad weather will find a few faithful followers braving the elements.

Just last week one of the most notable additions to Lincoln's amateur stables was made when Richard Faulkner purchased "Prim," an American-bred, five-gaited saddle horse. All the members of the Faulkner family are expert riders, and Richard Faulkner, E. J. Faulkner, and Edwin and Virginia Faulkner may be seen riding together many afternoons a week This spring Miss Virginia Faulkner expects to own a horse.

M. Wasserman also has a new horse, purchased this past week. It is "Royal Flame," a five-gaited, blooded horse, which has won ribbons in Kansas City four times against Lulu Long's horses. Mr. Wasserman rides daily, and expects to have a great deal of pleasure this spring with "Royal Flame."

Among the horses at the Sidles farm, are "Kymo F." belonging to Harry Sidles, and "Maude McDonald," belonging to Fred S. Sidles. Both were purchased about a year ago. "Kymo F's" sire was "Rex Chief A," a famous Missouri horse. At the present Harry and Fred Sidles are in California, where they will attend the Los Angeles horse show. They may buy some show horses to bring back to Lincon.

"Jimmy" a half-standard, half-thoroughbred four-year old, was presented to Miss Margaret Ames at Christmas time. Miss Ames is one of the most devoted of horsewomen, and she rides three and four afternoons every week.

Several other Lincoln people, though they do not have their own horses yet, are devoted to this sport. Mrs. Pace Woods and Mrs. S. R. McKelvie are expert horsewomen and enjoy many hours this way. Nathan Gold is also a frequent rider.

University Notes

Dr. E. H. Barbour will speak on "Elephants of the Past and Present" as a special feature for the university museum program at Morrill hall Sunday at 4 o'clock. Supplementary to this, a two-reel motion picture, "Why Elephants Leave Home," will be shown. Due to the fact that the lecture room on the lower floor of Morrill hall is hardly large enough to take care of all those who attend the museum programs it has become necessary to admit only those children who are accompanied by an adult. However, the elephant picture will be shown at 3 o'clock for children only.

Nancy M. Waters of the Whittier junior high school has presented to the museum a large variegated clay vase to the museum. The vase is made from Bentville, Arkansas clay and is of interest because of the many colors which appear in a swirl around the vase. This type of pottery has the name of Niloak, which is derived from the technical name for clay, kaolin.

Dr. Charles Fordyce, professor of educational measurements and research in the teachers college, spoke to the annual convention of the Nebraska Retail Hardware association at Omaha Thursday on the topic, "Personality as a Factor in Business."

A number of scholarships in economics and business research of the annual value of $500 each are offered to graduate students in the University of Nebraska. They are intended primarily for graduates of this university, but are open also to candidates from other universities. Applications are being received by Prof. G. O. Virtue in the college of business administration until March 1.

Louis Pelzer, professor of history at the University of Iowa, is engaged in research work here at the state historical society's library while visiting in Lincoln. He is seeking material on "the cow country" for a book he plans to write.

Charles Alfred Turrell, a former student in the department of geology, now connected with the Stratford Tourist bureau with offices in New York and Paris, visited Dr. E. H. Barbour at the museum last week.

For but a trifle greater cost you can enjoy the comfort, substantial beauty and economical upkeep of a Brick Home.

Seven Daykin Eligibles Organize Bachelors' Club to Combat Cunning of the Pursuing Sex

BY LULU MAE COE.

Ladies who plan to leap this year can pass up Daykin as a happy hunting ground.

The eligibles of the town declared against wedding bells when other bells were ringing in the glad new leap year.

Not for Daykin bachelors the girl with nature's own marcel, cheeks that shame a rouge box, tooth paste advertisement teeth, and eyes of heaven's blue.

They care not for the maidens equally at home with the broom and the golf sticks, who can beat eggs or a hand at bridge, who can play the piano and sew a fine seam.

She may put a movie queen out of the running, but believe that woman's place is in the kitchen, but she'll never catch sight of a Daykin bachelor.

They don't want any kind of girls. And they've organized agin' 'em. A sort of union and strength idea. One might be weak, but never with half a dozen others to support him.

To Remain Eligibles.

If a lady with a positive eye as much as glances at a Daykin eligible as he edits copy or sells calico, or whatever it is that Daykin eligibles do, he'll scuttle down the alley or slip into a crack.

They're free, white, and twenty-one. And, they are going to remain free—if organization can do anything for them.

"Butch" Boese, Herman Haake, "Hank" Kohler, "Bill" Vienop, "Al" Koepff, George A. Henkel—he's leading the boys safely through the year—and "Happy" Alloway—oh, ladies, we are seven—but there's no more in Daykin like us.

Hearing the patter of ladies with matrimonially inclined thoughts, the seven organized the Daykin Bachelors' club for the common defense. Leap year was not to find them unprepared. They passed noble resolutions, and fortified themselves against feminine wiles hopes, or ambitions held this year by the always fair and, now, privileged sex.

Realize Human Frailty.

They meet at 6 o'clock. Probably around the restaurant dinner table. No white hands to broil a steak and make pudding for them. Eligible single men, they, who plan to stay young, as they put it.

The following resolutions were passed—after discussion, expunging, and amending:

"Whereas, We realize the frailty of the human heart in its encounter with feminine charms and clever wiles of the fair sex, and

"Whereas, We are now living in the calendar year 1928, commonly called leap year, which is an open season for all sorts of proposals and alluring billet-doux, and

"Whereas, Valentine day is just around the corner, and the incantations of the good St. Valentine come with added force because of this leap year, and

"Whereas, We find ourselves unable singly to defend ourselves against the premeditated enchantments of the fair sex, and incapable to continue the unequal struggle single-handed and alone, therefore be it

"Resolved, That we band ourselves together for the common defense, pursuing the ideals of platonic friendship, Jeffersonian wit and Walt Masonry humor; and be it further

Willing To Be Martyrs.

"Resolved, That we are willing to be roasted for our views, but we are not willing to 'jump from the frying pan into the fire,' since we believe an ounce of good fellowship is worth a wagonload of domestic infelicity; and be it further,

"Resolved, That it is altogether fitting and proper that we adopt as our favorite flower, the bachelor button; as our tree, the single-tree; as our favorite song, "The Battle Cry of Freedom;' and as our favorite epithet, 'Thanks for the buggy ride!' And be it still further

"Resolved, That we have lessened the risks of bad weather on the farm by our belief that "It's always fair weather when good fellows get together' and be it even further

"Resolved, That no member of the Daykin Bachelors' club shall be permitted to emerge into that state of being commonly called marriage, without first applying to the club for a permit at least two weeks in advance of the wedding day."

Single Loophole Allowed.

Well, it's a strong minded young lady that would want husbands so fond of resoluting. It would bode ill for a fair matrimonial voyage.

The boys have allowed themselves a loophole, too. They can get out if they want to.

But it might be a sad wreck of a soul who would appear for the ceremony with a Lohengrin background, after the brother bachelors had had their way with him for a fortnight. That resolution might be the most binding of all.

The boys think the batting average of the bachelors is a regular Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb affair. They've found Sir Isaac Newton, Michelangelo, Mendelssohn, Beethoven, Pitt, Raphael, Gibbon, Macaulay, Locke, Handel, Galileo, Kant, and Sir Joshua Reynolds excellent reasons for remaining single—what these illustrious bachelors did, others can do.

Want Bachelor President.

"Coming to our own United States, single blessedness was no barrier to the success of John G. Whitter, Washington Irving, Phillips Brooks, Walt Whitman, John Randolph, Thaddeus Stevens, James Whitcomb Riley, and James Buchanan, our only bachelor president," declaimed one bachelor orator of Daykin in eulogizing the bachelors of the world.

It's the club opinion that it is time for another bachelor president, and they are looking for one "if he will choose to run." George A. Henkel, worthy president of the noble organization, has been suggested.

A committee has been appointed to investigate statistics and ascertain the number of bachelor millionaires in the United States. They may be millionaires because they are bachelors, but they won't be bachelors long when it is known they are millionaires.

One member of the club was nearly asked for his resignation. Several photographs of lovely young things were festooned about his room. Membership meant more than love, so the beautiful ladies were used to start the furnace fire. Days sufficiently warm without a fire are in store for him when his chums discover his perfidy.

The Daykin bachelors aren't such hard boiled boys as a whole, after all.

One thought a ladies' auxiliary an excellent thing. Some one, probably, to prepare hot coffee, cake, sandwiches, salad and similar edibles while the boys extolled the dangers of marriage and the pleasures of their free estate.

The idea was voted down. They knew that the Daykin girls had a mind, too, and would not become a tail to any such kite.

These Daykin bachelors had their picture taken at the railroad station, but not to snare sweet young things off the train and into the kitchen. Rather did they tae their signs to the station as a terrible example to husband hunting leap year ladies not to stop in Daykin. Their signs read, "Leap Year Holds No Terrors For Us"; "Embattled Bachelors are We"; "Old Maids Beware." From left to right, the bachelor boys are Herman Haake, "Butch" Boese, George A. Henkel, president, "Al" Koepff, "Hank" Kohler, "Happy" Alloway, and "Bill" Vienop. In the lower picture, the lineup reads, in the front row, Messrs. Boese, Kohler, Vineo, and Haake; and in the back, Koepff, Henkel and Alloway.

George Henkel is president, "Happy" Alloway, vice-president, and "Al" Koepff, keeper of the records. "Bill" Vienop is keeper of the exchequer, "Butch" Boese, sergeant-at-arms, to lead the ladies away who might come to a meeting; Herman Haake, keeper of the relics—the one who stays true to the club probably; "Hank" Kohler, keeper of time—whyfor, with no wife to object, and "Cotton" Wood, keeper of memoirs, or historian—how long will the history be.

The motto—Kiplin's own—"A young man married is a young man marred."

For any leap year correspondence, there's been a typist engaged. His job is to return the missives unopened, with proper notation. "His" job; yes, his—what would a bachelors' club do with a kind of stenographer gentlemen prefer?

MODERN EVE

THE SHOPPER

Let me do your shopping. There is such a wide variety of styles and, of course, since all spring merchandise is new, the size range is complete. So all you need to do is write me, enclosing money order.

—MODERN EVE, Lincoln Star.

Just the Place

YOU'VE been wanting to know about. It's the Lincoln Mattress Factory, the very place to send that old mattress that needs mending, renovating, or remaking, perhaps you have an old feather bed which would make a very fine soft feather mattress, and of course pillows can be remade, too! You'd never hesitate a minute if you knew what fine mattresses they can make for you at very little cost. Call them up, thev'll give you an estimate and give you one day service, too. B-2828.

Just Name Anything

IN the way of wearing apparel that needs cleaning and I'll tell you off hand that O. J. Fee at the Evans has a special service in his fine establishment to give it the proper care it needs. Now take kid gloves for instance, you'd scarcethink that they could be cleaned perfectly without danger to the fabric, but not so at all, just send them to the Evans, they'll clean and restore them to as nearly the same color as is humanly possible, and they're sure to have that new glossy look they had when new. Many Lincoln women who have spent a lot of money buying the best gloves are having them dyed at the Evans. It's just one fine way of having new loves from old ones.

Despite the fact that we're having a few springy days there are still a lot more wintry ones in store for us. So if your winter coats need a second cleaning, don't put it off—because the dirt and grime rots nice fabrics and their harmless method removes all soil and prolongs the wear. Send your scarfs and hats too, and anything else you have that is dirty. It's almost the same as swapping old for new, from the way they look when they're returned to you. Call them at B-6961.

To Those Whose

HEARING is defective I'm sure this will be valuable information. Mr. J. F. Ayres in the optical department of the C. W. Fleming Jewelry Store has a new acousticon which is so perfected that a very deaf person may hear at a remarkable range. This tiny device is no bigger than a dime, and a very convenient size to be inconspicuous when worn.

Since February

IS waffle morth, let's celebrate and have waffles every morning during the month. Or, don't you have a waffle iron? Well, if you don't already have one, I'll tell you the place to go. The Iowa-Nebraska Light and Power company are having a special selling this month of a beautiful all nickle waffle iron complete with nickel tray for only $8.95. These are of very high grade make, they have hidden cord attachments, aluminum plates and bake a 7 inch waffle. And 95c and it's yours with 8 months to pay the balance. Take a look at their fine window display and you're sure to decide to own one yourself. You know a very popular Sunday night lunch is a menu which consists of nothing but waffles.

The Consolidation

OF two of Lincoln's most popular beauty parlors gives us the "Giffen Marinello Beaute Salon," Miss Norine Lewis, who was formerly owner and manager of the Marinello Shop at Herpolsheimer, has now consolidated with Miss Edith Belle Lewis of the Giffen Beauty Parlor and the new shop is now ready to serve its public. Patrons, both old and new are invited to come to call at 1340 M street. The distinctive service which has characterized each shop in the past will be doubly high grade in the future. A full line of both Marinello and Burnham's products will be carried.

You'll find it easy to have an appointment at almost any hour convenient. Their staff of expert operators include Miss Lydia Lee who would like to see all her old and new patrons.

New Paris Item

There is a lace straw body which Rose Descat has begun to use, called the denteile straw body by some, which, of course, means lace in French. It is an open-work pattern much like the old tuscan shapes, and it is made up into little cap shapes that fit the head closely and show the hair beneath, or have soft brims and are used in combination with color beneath.

First Fashions of Spring as seen by Modern Eve

The Band Box Lid is Open

AND you may peep in on a fairyland of beautiful spring hats, but I advise you to use the door and go into the Band Box in the Lindell Hotel Bldg., and select from these new creations "your" hat. There's none more beautiful, and they're only $5.00.

Printzess Suits

FOR modern princesses or I might better say coeds. For these attractive suits of twills, mannish stripes, and tweeds are sure to intrigue the modern girl who has learned to dress her part. See Herpolsheimer's first showing of these suits. The fabrics are imported and they are made with straight coats, wrap skirts, neatly tailored to the mode employing the use of braid and buttons. After you've decided on your suit, next choose your blouse, and my advice would be one of those of tailored broadcloth. Their extreme simplicity gives the suit just the proper touch. These, of course are in the blouse section and are selling for $1.95.

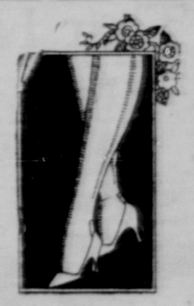

Don't Let Spring Arrive

AND find you without one of the most important items of your wardrobe, your suit. And above all things, don't buy, until you see those t ng shown at Harris-Goar's. Tweeds, of course are ever smart and especially true are these 3-piece ones of short box coats, skirt which are made on a sham, and has cunning kick plaits and then in harmonizing tones to complete the ensemble are sweaters—the price of $19.75 is almost unbelievable—while you're there you'd better look over their smart spring dresses which have just arrived. One group I know you'll delight in are the regular $15 bright flat crepes which are selling now at $7.95 or 2 for $15.00, and you'll wonder how dresses of such smart appearance can possibly be so inexpensive.

If You're Below Average

HEIGHT and a wee bit plump, in other words "hard to fit," and daily bemoan the fact that you cannot find a pretty dress just your size, cease ptning, for I've found what's called half size dresses. These dresses are at Gold's, and there's every imaginable color in every delightful spring shade and so new and youthful in the new godets styles, straight lines, and some very frivolous in their trims of frilly jabots, hand drawn laces and tucks. You're sure to find just the dress you've been wanting, and I'm sure you'll choose at least one of red-skin print, because prints are positively the thing, and these of primitive American design are really the "last word." And when I tell you the price is only $15, you'll want to hustle down and choose more than one. You'll find a complete size range from 14 to 52½.

We Expect Certain Things

FROM some people, or merchandise, but when we look forward to the "last word" in I. Miller hose, their designers are always so far in advance of us poor mortals, we cannot anticipate enough. This spring they have surprised us in designing a hose, which, along with unbelievable sheerness is "thigh high" and can be worn with the briefest of skirts. They are being shown at Speier's in the lovely spring shades of shari, elephant, blossom and Rosita.

Those New Navy Georgettes

ARE so different from the old straight line frocks. They're frilly and lacy this season and Speier's have a very smart showing for early spring wear. Ensembles, too, are there. The utter chic of these new spring suits cannot be compared with. Of course, fashioned of the most beautiful fabrics in delightful colors, and tailored to perfection.

The First Showing

OF Selby's women's shoes and shoes of high grade for children may now be seen at Wells and Frost, 128 North 10th Street.

I'd like to shop for you.

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

Bright Lights Or a Home?—Some Sacrifice One for the Other — A Match-Making Mother of Three Daughters Has Her Hands Full.

One Or Many?

Bright lights—or a home.

The love of a good man—or the attentions of many.

Some choose one and some the other, and often a man or woman chooses love and home only to find that the bright lights have the greatest lure. Or else they grasp the excitement of the dance, the clash of the jazz band, the intoxication of both bootleg and sex, and then discover that a home would have been the worth-while thing to seek.

These are the misfits, the unfortunates.

But take those who are naturally drawn to gaiety and night life, can they be "reformed," changed into home-loving souls? I wonder. I wonder if "Stung's" wife would ever be happy around the kitchen, dusting the living room, planting a bit of a garden or cutting the lawn. Could she ever be satisfied with the devotion of one man, or does her nature call for the fleeting attentions of many?

I don't know, yet "Stung" is coming to us and asking our opinion. He loves his wife, which will amaze many of you, and you will tell him to forget her and find a girl who can bake a pie and make a house into a home. And others, maybe, will think there is hope if he tries in the right way to win her. Out of your different experiences and reactions to life, will you answer "Stung"?

Dear Minerva: Everybody tells you his ideas and opinions, and I am wondering if I can tell you mine too, and have you and the readers reply.

Not long ago I met a woman at one of the dance halls. I was introduced by a friend, and after seeing her several times we were real friends. She told me she had been married and had a boy ten years old.

We went together for about four months, and I found I truly loved her and I asked her if she would marry me. She said yes, and I was happy. I told her all about myself and how much I was earning, $150 a month. She said she didn't care for money—only wanted someone to be good to her and love her. I said," I certainly will," so in a month we got married.

But, to go back. She owned a house, and told me we might as well live there. So I bought new furniture and thought we would be happy. For three months she worked nights as a practical nurse, but finally I told her she ought to be at home. She was taking her mother's job while she was away and when her mother returned my wife stayed home for awhile.

Then I lost my job and we were both out of work. This made her angry and she left, saying she was going to look for something to do. She said she had landed a job and had to work from 7:30 to 12:30. I asked her how she liked the work and she told me it was none of my affairs.

We quarreled and she told me to get out. I did and I instructed the furniture people to come and take away everything I had bought. I thought she would want to make up again, but she didn't.

And, Minerva, I found out that she wasn't working, but was dancing in one of the cheaper dance halls. Also I saw her leave several times with a man in his car. I was heartbroken. She has a good mother and a fine boy. They both liked me and treated me fine. I feel sorry fir both of them.

And I found out that my wife hadn't been married once, but twice, three times counting our marriage. I am so unhappy. I can't sleep nights and I think I still love her in spite of everything. Do you think she would ever change? She doesn't want any money from me. I have always wanted a home and I love the boy—yet I hear women say you can't find a good man.

What can I do, Minerva? Do you think she would ever love me again or want to settle down in a little home? Tell me. Yours truly, Stung.

The Story's End.

Here is a letter I second with enthusiasm. I've asked the same thing many a time. How do the problems we hear about in The Mail turn out? Take "Stung," for example. Many will probably reply to him. He will think about it, and then either go his own way or decide that So-and-So's advice good. Then he will try it. Will it work? That's what we want to know. We want to know about "Stung" and all the rest of you who place your problems before us. We're more than curious, for we take the time and thought to reply. We're interested.

Dear Minerva: I think that your Mail is fine, and having seen a few of my letters in print, I am going to write another.

I have a very inquisitive nature and so I am going to ask you a question that I have often wondered about. In every Mail you and the readers give advice, whether the affair be large or small. People are always kind enough to send in advice, but Minerva, do the persons who receive the advice ever make use of it? Do they write you and tell that they used such and such advice and how the affair turned out?

Anyway, Minerva, it is very seldom that I read the end of the story in The Mail, and I have a great curiosity about many of the cases. Inquisitive Reader.

Match-Making Mamma.

Reading between the lines in this letter, I'd say a match-making mamma is the main trobule. When she gets one girl safely married she'll turn her attentions to the next in line and boost her game with the same enthusiasm. Oh yes, there are as many match-makingg mothers in the world as there are daughters).

But in the meantime, while the lucky (?) girl is being protected, how can we help "Kitty," who is only sixteen?

Dear Minerva: I am going to write my story to you and then ask you if you blame me for going wild.

I am sixteen years old. I am a semi-blonde, five feet two and weigh 109. I am of the flapper type, have two sisters older than myself, and no brothers. One of my sisters, two years older than I, goes around with me. Most people take us for twins; we look so much alike.

But Minerva, this is my story. My sister has a very nice boy friend. He is twenty-four. I have gotten so I care for him a lot. He cares for her and she cares for him. And he cares for me, I know, but not like he does for my sister. Minerva, he is so different with me when my sister isn't around. They take me everywhere with them. But my mother will not leave me alone with him. She does not realize she is taking my only few moments of happiness away. He has gone away now for a month, and when he first left, I thought I would go mad.

Minerva, one night I realized he could never be anything to me (as he hopes to marry my sister) so I did not care what happened. I went for a walk and met two fellows who ask ed the girl I was with and myself to go for a ride. This was 7:30. Feeling I had lost my only love, I got in.

It was 1.50 when I got home. My mother and sisters were frantic but that did not matter. The boys we were out with started to get fresh, but found out we wouldn't stand for it, so were satisfied with just putting their arms around us. Minerva, please believe me, that was all. The boy has been coming to see me. I have plenty of friends, both boys and girls.

Minerva, I get letters from the boy I care so much about. I read them over every night. My sister reads the letters I receive and the ones I send out.

Minerva, my mother and I do not get along very well, for she says I am doing my best to part my sister and this fellow. I would never do that, for I would rather see my sister happy. He and I have dreams together, but he says his dream is for my sister. He does not realize the pain he is causing me. He knows though that I care for him.

My mother insults every fellow that I bring to the house, for she is afraid they will look at my sister and break up the affair between her and my friend. Do you blame me for meeting boys out? I do not do it because I want to. It is because I do not have the chance of a future that my sister has. Kitty.

A. Let me tell you a few truths. Kitty. First of all, you and the young man are playing with fire. He knows it and is getting a kick out of it, but you're getting hurt. He has no business writing letters to you and treating you differently when you are alone. But it gives him a thrill to have two girls adoring him instead of one. Get your pride where it belongs and spoil his little game.

Now for your mother. Maybe she is a natural born match-maker and maybe she's weary of the responsibility of three girls and wants to see them safely married. To avoid complications, she keeps an eagle eye on you, realizing your infatuation for the man who is engaged to your sister. She doesn't want anything to interfere with that plan. She'll be just as watchful for your interests when your sister is out of the way.

But most important of all—you. If you don't watch out, you are going to let thoughts of romance, beaux and wedding turn your head. Don't do it. Save yourself. Find something worth while and work for it—good marks in school, a self supporting job some day. Be somebody—not just a youngster looking for a man to take care of her. If you keep on drifting as you are now you'll be absolutely characterless. Be an individual and play the game like a big girl. And don't play with fire.

Duck For Cover.

If you've ever knocked a flapper, duck for cover. Here's one after you. Dear Minerva: I have read quite a number of the letters printed in your Mail. Some of them are very interesting and some of them give me a pain in the neck. Whenever I hear anyone say that all boys are bad, or that all flappers are indecent, I am disgusted. It is just as easy to find good boys and girls today as it was fifteen or twenty years ago.

Speaking of flappers, it is the most sensible thing that has ever been done by women—when they bobbed their hair and donned short skirts. And what harm is the use of powder and paint? Some of these narrow-minded, addle-pated knockers go out with a boy or girl and because they are not dead-heads and wish to have a good time, they get the idea that the world has gone to the well-known bow-wows. As a matter of fact, we are never young but once. And, why, in the name of all sense should the young people try to be old men and women at the age of sixteen or eighteen?

It gives me a huge laugh to hear some of the knockers say that the young people of yesterday were so much better. Another thing, a girl of that age if often driven from her home because her parents are nitwits, not because she is really wild. Best luck to you and the readers. O. J. M.

Questions In Brief.

Harry: Spain recognized the independence of Mexico in 1821.

M. F.: A good way to clean corduroy clothing is to wash them in warm white soap suds, hold them under running water and hang on the line without wringing to dry.

Martha: The leap-year rule is as follows: Those years whose date numbers are exactly divisible by four are leap years, unless they are exactly divisible by 100. In such cases they are not leap years unless they are exactly divisible by 400. Thus the year 1900 was not a leap year but the 2000 will be a leap year.

N. N.: Epsom salts was originally obtained from waters of a mineral spring in Epsom, England, but the principal source of the commercial salt is now the Strassfurt salt mines in Saxony.

Mary: Sulphur and molasses which our forefathers took in the spring provides a good tonic. However, people of the present pay more attention to their diet than formerly. Those who have a well-balanced diet with plenty of vegetables and fruits do not require the sulphur and mollasses.

Jim: There are three federal penitentiaries in the United States. They are located at Atlanta, Ga., Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; and the McNeil Island, Washington. Owing to the shortage of penitentiary space the federal government finds it necessary to place some of its prisoners in state prisons. The federal government also maintains three naval prisons, Mare Island, California; Boston, Massachusetts, and Portsmouth, N. H.

Foot Relief Boot Shop Opens.

The opening of the Foot Relief Boot shop is announced by S. C. Mason, manager. The shoe parlor, located at 1208 N street, is featuring the Flexridge stylish arch-supported shoes.

The shop is very attractively decorated in rose and green and will handle exclusive styles in women's footwear. The parlor is arranged in a novel way. The old fashioned shoe benches surrounded by stock-lined walls have been abandoned for lounging chairs arranged in a home-like manner about the shop. And the large stock is concealed in the rear.

This idea is being used extensively in the large cities of the east, but Mr. Mason is the first to bring it to this part of the state.

Hastings Notes

Nearly 100 students of the college will sing in Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," which will be presented during graduation week this spring under the direction of H. M. Fuhr, director of the college conservatory of music. The production, which is being backed financially by business men of the city, will include a chorus of 400 voices, professional soloists, and a symphony orchestra.

President Calvin H. French has returned from a three-weeks trip in the east, during which he spoke over radio stations at Boston and Chicago and attended three denominational college meetings at Atlantic City, N. J. At the Presbyterian college union meeting Dr. French was reappointed one of the six presidents of the fifty-five in the union to serve on the committee which represents the denomination in the inter-denominational council of church boards of education.

The endowment of Hastings college has been nearly doubled in the past two years, according to the records of Business Manager J. E. Pasek, who has just received an additional gift from one of the city's business houses. Two years ago on February 1 the endowment of the college was $355,000, one year later it had mounted to $540,000, while the present endowment is $730,000.

On a trip into Kansas over the week-end the debate squad, with Coach Joseph H. Baccus, engaged in a series of six pre-season debates with four Kansas college teams. All of the contests were open-forum no-decision debates, their purpose being to aid in preparation for the regular season which opens here on Tuesday, February 7, in a clash with the Grand Island college debators.

Postponement of the annual week of prayer, which was to have been held the week of February 7, has been announced by President French because of the illness of the speaker, the Rev. Herbert H. Field, of Brooklyn.

"The Girl and Her Home" was the topic of the Y. W. C. A. meeting Thursday, led by Miss Alice Criswell, '31, Hastings. Miss Elsie Longstaff, '29, Hansen, sang and Miss Vesta King, '30, Sterling, Colo., gave a reading. Talks were given by the Misses Fern Rutherford, '31; Ellouise Mitchell, '29; Velma Quig, '30, all of Hastings; and Miss Elizabeth Crouse, '31, Seward.

The week of prayer was considered at the Thursday Y. M. C. A. meeting, when short talks were given by Dean F. E. Weyer and President Calvin E. French.

Doane Notes

Mrs. Lucile Reed Sliger, who before her marriage had charge of the vocal department in the Doane Conservatory from 1911 to 1914 died in Flower hospital, Toledo, O., on January 23 from the effects of an operation. She was a member of the Reed family of Weeping Water, and her sister, Mrs. T. M. King with her husband is in missionary work in Mt. Silinda, Africa.

Gold footballs were presented to the 1927 Tiger football team at the chapel service Friday, Jan. 27 by President Edwin B. Dean, in recognition of the one thousand per cent record made last fall. Coaches Haylett and Spink received the honors along with fifteen men who lettered. A special feature of the occasion was the presentation of the gold football to Dr. W. H. Pallett by Capt. "Gordy" Baldwin. The honor was voted to Dr. Pallett by members of the squad in behalf of his untiring services in keeping Doane's "iron men" in the best physical condition possible throughout a strenuous season.

Goitre Not a Disease

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and it not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. 695, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. CEILING OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CHAMBER. -BUCKLIN PHOTO

BY LULU MAE COE.

A clear head, a compass, and a blue print are necessary to find one's way adequately about the yet unfinished portions of the new capitol.

However, when the boards, wires, cleaning machines, hoists, nail kegs, pails, ladders and cement bags are taken away, Nebraskans will have the opportunity to see some very fine mosaic work and particularly interesting architecture.

At the present moment the sections under construction are decorated with large "No Admittance" signs, delicately balanced boards covering stone steps, and large areas of dust and dirt and powdered stone, with an occasional pigeon flying about to lend an out-of-door effect. In spite of its incomplete appearance, this part of the new state house is more nearly ready than appears to those peering through the dividing fence.

Foyer Is Show Place.

The chamber of the house of representatives, the foyer the rotunda, the second supreme court room, and the main room of the state library are fairly well along. Not tomorrow will they be thrown open to inspection, but, viewed from the point of the years of capitol construction the time is brief, until we'll all be walking about viewing the beauties made by man.

The foyer opening out of the north vestibule, and into the great central rotunda, is one of the show places of the building. More than 100 feet in length, the vault is inlaid with mosaic in brilliant colors, and the whole forms a striking entrance into the rotunda.

he evolution of the world is depicted in the tile of the vestibule, foyer, rotunda and house. The vestibule represents nature, and the foyer history. The designs of the rotunda are planned with the state as the center, and the house chamber tells pictorially of the life of the Indian.

Divided Into Three Bays.

The foyer is divided by high arches into three sections or bays. The first represents traditions of the past, the central one, life of the present, and the third, ideals of the future, each a fundamental aspect of life. The wall panels in traditions of the past represent school and family, in life of the present, reflection and recreation, and in ideals of the future, reverence for truth and a sense of beauty.

For the family the figures of the home maker, the father and the mother are the symbols, and child and school are represented by teacher and pupil. As the symbols of recreation a boy tossing a ball and a girl holding a bouquet of flowers, have been used, and for the symbolism of the twin panel, reflection, the figures of a scientist and a scholar. Architect and artist represent a sense of beauty and a statesman and a philosopher are for reverence for truth. From the pillars to the arches are four other figures in tile, symbolic of law, labor, religion and public spirit.

The floor of the foyer is to be completed with tile motif. The niches in the walls are to be filled by the state, possibly with busts of prominent Nebraskans. Between the niches are low recessed green doors, which open out on to stone terraces, which will eventually overlook two courtyards of greensward, fountains and Grecian benches.

Balconies Overlook Rotunda.

Leading from the vestibule to the half balconies on each side of the foyer are narrow stone steps. The balconies offer excellent opportunity to view the tile work of the foyer vault of the corridor and give a glimpse into the heights of the rotunda. Other stone steps at the south of the balconies lead to the corridor, out of which the house galleries open.

Four balconies, of which one joins the foyer of balconies, overlook the rotunda. With but a partially finished floor and with the dome but a lattice work of timbers, the rotunda is yet majestic with its straight ausere sweep of sharply rising walls. The huge pillars at the entrances are Breccia Armarante marble, and the smaller ones at the top are Benjeau.

The four balconies, one at the rear of the main house gallery one opening out of the state library room, one offering a view from the future senate chamber, and the fourth, forming the bridge, have carved balustrades of Utah onyx, a shining cream and beige onyx which lends its own distinction to the building. An unusually fine view of the rotunda is afforded from any of these balconies, with their tile floors.

Carved Buffalo Heads.

The onyx, set between square stone pillars is carved in square open work panels, with a bird or a buffalo head centering each one, and with formal designs of maize and stalks between the panels. Below the balustrade is a carved design of an Indian arrow head and dentil. The same kind of onyx is used in the grills of the foyer, giving a soft, subdued light.

Underneath the future dome of the rotunda is an inscription, done in carved gold lettering. Particularly fitting is the thought, as the rotunda is in the exact center of the building, immediately below the tower. The inscription reads: "He who would duly inquire about the best form of the state ought first to determine which is the most eligible life. Men should not think it slavery to live according to the rule of the constitution for it is their salvation. Laws and constitutions spring from the moral dispositions of the members of the state. Law and order deliver the soul. A community like an individual has work to do."

In addition to the inevitable details of finishing the main work yet to be done in the house chamber is the laying of the floor. This room is located in the shadow of the eastern pavilion, and will seat 100 members when furnished. Galleries on three sides are supported by Red Arkansas fossil marble pillars, with capitals of Golden Travis from Utah. The walls are of Bedford stone and acoustic tile, with above the two promenades within the room, and from which entrance may be had from the right angle corridors. The quotation, the same as that on the hood of the fireplace in the governor's reception room, has been carved above the speaker's chair, "Equality Before the Law."

Indian Life Depicted.

While not so striking in color as the foyer mosaics, the ceiling and outline panels, over the speaker's rostrum and above each of the three galleries in the house of representatives chamber are very lovely. Blue, brown, and a lemon yellow are the predominating shades, with some red and green in the ceiling motifs.

The life of the red man is depicted in this room, as that of the white man will be told in the senate chamber. Four six-sided figures carry the main thoughts of Indian life, the hunt, warfare, agriculture, and the camp fire. Radiating from the crimson and blue central motif, suggestive of the Indian worship of the sun, is a formal motif, with smaller figures of Indian life and lore at definite intervals in the arcs. Animals, plants, and objects which they believed to have been animated by a more or less beneficent spirit, together with some primitive symbols of their economic and aesthetic arts and industries, such as the mortar and pestle, the iron cooking pot slung on three sticks, and similar symbols.

The representative's chamber is reached on either side by long foyers, which with their vaulted ceilings and gray walls make one of the most artistic sections of the new portion of the structure. They are plain, except for the beauty of the brick and stone construction, and they give a strangely medieval effect, and suggest entrance to a cathedral rather than to a legislative hall. Casement windows overlook a potential court yard.

Novel Hand Rails.

Various small rooms serving the chamber are in process of completion, such as telephone booths, press quarters, coat rooms, and a walnut finish is used in these. The committee rooms for the house are located on the first floor, reached with ease by a brass-railed stairway. Novel hand rails on the stairs leading from the house floor to the gallery are carved in the stone, so that the pedestrian is certain of a firm hold, unless the wall crumble beside him.

The Nebraska state library, the oldest public library in the state, has much larger quarters with the opening of its main room in the south middle part of the building on the third floor, corresponding to the upper portion of the foyer on the north. Stacks containing the books frequently in use, probably text books and supreme court reports, will be arranged in the alcoves of the new room.

On the balcony under the windows, the walls will be occupied by other stacks. Attic space, from which place some of these volumes will be taken, will be reserved for new purchases. In this room, tables and chairs will be placed in the center of the room in order to make those studying there in convenient proximity to the desired books.

Library of 90,000 Volumes.

This room is 104 feet long, 70 feet wide, and the ceiling is 33 feet high. The balcony is 21 feet wide, and the reading room is 32 by 41 and the ceiling is 20 feet, 6 inches high. Books have not been removed yet, as it is necessary first to measure the available footage, but the library now has 90,000 volumes, exclusive of decision reports of the Nebraska Supreme court, and Nebraska statutes and session laws, of which there are more than 35,000 volumes on the shelves for sale or exchange.

The main library room is a cool looking place, with gray as its main color note. The room is paneled in St. Genevieve Rose marble as far as the arched ceiling, in mission plaster. The stacks are all in gray, and the room has the atmosphere of a quiet study spot.
Separated from the first Supreme court room by a single corridor is the second one, now nearly completed. It overlooks a court, with the bench at the north end. The room is paneled in walnut three-quarters of the way to the ceiling, and has a heavy beamed ceiling. The molding of the panels, the half-pillars, and the ceiling are done in a bright motif of red, gray, green, and yellow.
The corridors adjoining the main rooms of the new section and smaller auxiliary rooms are also being completed. The first floor corridor opening into the south entrance has been paneled with gray marble, the same as that in use on the part now used by the public, and the one at the side of the new court room has half pillars of marble extending to the vault, with decorative tile in the adjoining panels. The capitol now has an entrance on the east on the first floor, with the corridor extending west into the center of the building.

Mrs. Sarah Ross, 83-Year-Old Newcastle Resident, Has Woven Over Fifty Rugs in Two Years

By HARRY L. PETERSON.

NEWCASTLE, Neb., Feb. 4—Hands that have been used to doing something for eighty years can't be idle, so finds Mrs. Sarah Ross, sr., 83-year-old resident of this town, who weaves a rag rug or pieces a patchwork quilt every other week. In the past two years she has woven more than fifty rugs and a dozen patch quilts. She does all her weaving without the aid of glasses as she has gained her second sight.
Mrs. Ross was born in St. John's, New Brunswick, Canada, July 26, 1844. She grew to womanhood there. When she was 21 she came with a group of emigrants to Iowa, Sioux City being the destination. That was in 1865 and the railroad extended then only as far as Missouri Valley. From Missouri Valley to Sioux City they traveled by wagon and oxen. Having heard of the rich land to be had for the taking in Dixon county the party decided to go there. Having no conveyances everyone had to walk the 25 miles. In the party with Mrs. Ross were Sam

ZION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

—A— MODERN, BE AUTIFUL CHURCH EDIFI CE

One of Lincoln's finest and most beautiful churches the Zion Congregational, standing today at 9th and D streets, was a thing undreamed of two years ago.

At that time the congregation occupied a little wooden structure at 4th and F streets, that it had used for 27 years. The church was organized with but a few members and now the services in the new auditorium seating nearly 1,200 persons are well attended.

Rev. G. J. Schmidt has been pastor of the Zion Congregational church for the past six and one-half years, and under his direction, this beautiful new church has been erected. Its members as well as the minister are confident that, with the unsurpassed location and edifice, progress will be unabated.

The new church of Gothic architecture was started in the summer of 1927, following a financial campaign by the congregation. The basement has been used since October last for Sunday school and services, but the auditorium will be used for the first time next Sunday the day of the dedication.

The Zion Congregational church was founded in 1900 by Superintendent M. E. Eversz of Chicago, and Rev. C. E. Osthoff was the first pastor. Succeeding him were Rev. S. H. Schwab, Rev. G. F. Grove, Rev. George Graff, Rev. C. A. Dettmers, and Rev. G. J. Schmidt.

Rev. Schmidt came to the church in 1921 from Fort Collins, Colorado where he held a pastorate for nine years.

The congregation was organized with very few members but it grew to be one of the strongest German churches in the city of Lincoln. It now has a well-organized Sunday school of five hundred or so under the capable leadership of Mr. A. Stromberger; a ladies' aid which has been working unceasingly for the new church for the last three years with Mrs. H. K. Bender as president; a progressive young peoples' organization, Herman Beck, president; a junior ladies' aid "The Zion Daughters" with Rose Donis as president, and a choir of forty voices under the supervision of Mr. August Heinz who has been the director for the past twenty-five years.

Warm Air Heating and Ventilation for the new German Zion Congregational Church

The NATIONAL SYSTEM of Heat with Ventilation combines the three recognized essentials of the modern heating plant—heat, ventilation and humidity. Thus this system assures maximum comfort and health conditions. Particularly adaptable to Schools, Churches, Theatres, Industrial Plants, Garages, Public Buildings and Large Homes. For thirty-five years an unqualified success the world over.

Human beings require a certain definite relation between humidity, temperature and air motion at all times. Simply to heat a building is but a small part of the task. Air must be circulated within or the occupants of the building will not be comfortable nor will the interior be wholesome. With the NATIONAL SYSTEM warmed air is properly humidified and quietly and evenly circulated to all parts of the building, thus doing away with all discomforts caused by drafts, stuffiness, over-heating and other annoyances common to heating plants working on a different principle.

In the summer the NATIONAL SYSTEM will circulate fresh air. This offers a decided advantage to Industrial plants, Schools, Churches, Theatres, in fact, any building where large numbers of people congregate and where air is likely to be stuffy without some arrangement for circulation during the summer months. THE "FIFTH HORSEMAN."

Not until Ibanez's family sees fit to bare the incompleted manuscript upon which the celebrated novelist was working when death interrupted his labors will the world know what he had in mind for the "Fifth Horseman."

The public's appetite had been whetted by the knowledge that this unfinished work of the distinguished author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" had been given the title of "The Fifth Horseman." There its information ended. Ibanez was an exile from his own country, and he had taken refuge in a foreign land. How deeply he grieved over this banishment is well known; but his closest associates credited it with being responsible for the physical decline which ultimately resulted in his death. And in the same fashion it was recognized that Ibanez was deeply moved by what he considered the tragic plight of his countrymen under the dictatorship of a militarist.

Only by casual reference in a lecture given in Chicago in 1919 did Ibanez give possible hint of what the book he did not live to finish might contain. "There is," he said, a "Fifth Horseman. The only thing which can drive him away is social justice." What a broad field for the virile imagination of the novelist! War, hunger, pestilence and death—the four shadowy figures of that gripping story of humanity—what a devastating toll they have exacted from the countless millions who have passed from the stage! Social justice! Who can define it, let alone suggests those steps which will lead mankind to that perfected stage where the injustices of this advanced civilization shall be no more?

America has produced two great figures in this last century who gave freely of their talents, their strength and finally sacrificed their lives in their efforts to promote more of social justice in this world.

It was the ufailing devotion which Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson held for the eternal principles of social justice which endeared them to millions of their countrymen. Lincoln destroyed the institution of slavery in the United States; Wilson by reason of wise and intelligent financial legislation and through a number of laws affecting industrial conditions contributed much to the progress of social justice.

But it was not alone for what they accomplished that we honor and revere their memories. Lincoln was the gentle, kindly, compassionate, tolerant administrator; Wilson the cold, intellectual type. And yet each exhibited so many common characteristics, due in no small measure to the fact that each had his eyes fixed upon the same goal. Each was lonely and isolated. Each was conscious of the great responsibility; each made grave by the realization of the task ahead in achieving the goal. There is, in their lives, the proof that men, born under vastly different circumstances, with boyhoods totally dissimilar, and yet with the common bond of ideals, strikingly similar in facing the supreme test of their careers.

Subjecting America today to close scrutiny, there is so much to furnish substance for this "Fifth Horseman." So long as we remain an intolerant people, especially along racial and religious lines, the desired reign of social justice can never be realized. So long as there is class tyranny, whether it is expressed by labor or by capital, there can be no social justice. The oppression by labor, knowing full well its strength, is no less destructive of social justice than the greed and avarice of misguided capital which takes for itself every penny which it can grab, and which refuses to share with those who helped to create it. There can be no social justice so long as humanity refuses to pledge its heart to the termination of conquest and exploitation. Social justice is impossible so long as lawlessness is rampant.

In the language of Ibanez the world is striving today to drive this "Fifth Horseman" away. In America a new era of industrial and business development has dawned. There are fewer and fewer cases of ruthless exploitation and plundering on the part of great wealth. Capital and labor have arrived at a new understanding so that the strike or the lockout has become a weapon of last, desperate resort. More and more we are relying upon the peaceful methods of arbitration to settle our differences. We are still far from the goal but in these last two decades, even while Ibanez was speaking, we have written and are writing a glorious chapter in the history of social progress.

THREE ABSOLUTE MONARCHIES.

It is stated that Amanullah Khan, ameer of Afghanistan, who is now touring Europe, may come to the United States. If he does the people of this country will have the opportunity of seeing one of the only three remaining absolute monarchs on the face of the earth. The other two countries having such form of government are Siam and Abyssinia, the latter also being called Ethiopia, which name is preferred by its natives.

Unlike the rulers of the other two countries mentioned the ameer has never before been away from home and six weeks ago had never seen a railroad train nor a steamship. It must not be supposed, however, that he is not progressive, for he has invented an improved system of writing, which he teaches in the evening after the day's work is over. "We have million of illiterates," he says. "They need schools and they shall have them." He has abolished polygamy, and revised the penal laws, and is the editor of the only newspaper in his kingdom, which has a population of 12,000,000. He also owns a hotel and has an interest in a real estate business.

Quite in contrast with the ameer, the king of Siam, who is 34 years old, has spent the greater part of his life in England. He was educated at Eton, Oxford and Sandhurst and received his military education at St. Cyr, France. He also is the absolute ruler of about 12,000,000 people and is deeply appreciative of the obligation and responsibility placed upon him. To an American who was some time ago granted an audience, he said:

"I know your country of America. I have traveled there. You believe in democracy, and, strange as it may sound, coming from me, I too, believe in democracy and in representative government. But the time is not yet in this country for such a government. It is necessary to raise our people to a higher stage of civilization first. Education and schools are the way. But schools cost money and we are a small country and not rich. As we increase our cultivated area we shall have more money."

The dynasty of Ethiopia claims to be the oldest in the world, the royal family tracing its ancestry to King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, nearly 3,000 years ago. Most people are in the habit of speaking of Ethiopian and negro as synonymous terms, whereas scientists say that the Abyssianans are a Hamito-Semitic people, with no negro blood or characteristics. There are about 10,000,000 of them and their country was the only one in Africa remaining neutral in the World war. It was admitted to the league of nations in 1923, after the promulgation of a decree making slave trading punishable by death.

Waizeru Zaudito is queen of Ethiopia, but the real ruler is Ras Taffari, the regent, cousin of the queen His power is absolute, and he too is progressive, but is handicapped by the head men, who oppose every innovation, not desiring that the people shall acquire education, fearing that such advance will interfere with their exploitation.

In 1924 Ras Taffari went to Aden and had not been there long before he was viewing the city from the first airplane he had ever seen. Shortly thereafter he made a tour of the capitals of Europe, taking lions as presents to the king of England and the president of France and zebras for the lesser rulers. He is a proud, educated man and his subjects are devoted to him.

How long will these three remaining absolute monarchies exist? The present rulers of all of them would make government more liberal were they not certain that such move would result in evil rather than good. The ameer has most of his relatives and the head men of his organization with him on tour and it is said this is because he is afraid to leave them at home while he is away. Ras Taffari is compelled to watch every detail of his government to protect his illiterate subjects from the few educated ones.

The king of Siam was correct when he said that it is necessary to raise the people to a higher stage of civilization, but this is an apallingly slow process, as has been demonstrated in India, where superstition and religious fanaticism have conspired against progress. A few generations of such rulers as the three countries have now, however, will mean much for them, though it is not probable that they will ever approximate the west, socially or economically.

THE NORRIS RESOLUTION.

Public opinion has apparently borne fruit in the lower house of congress, as attested by the action of that body in giving the Norris constitutional amendment preference in its legislative status. The measure changes the date for the inauguration of the president of the United States, and does away with so-called "lame duck" sessions of congress.

The Norris resolution passed the senate three times, at three different sessions of congress, only to meet defeat in the lower branch. Although it was generally recognized that the people were favorable to its passage, the house refused to recognize such sentiment, and through the simple expediency of never permitting it to be reported out from the committee, smothered all discussion.

What may appear to be a relatively unimportant measure, but in reality a very vital one, now stands a chance of passage. "Lame duck" congresses have been a bane in this country for many years. Men, who have been repudiated by their constituency, because of their legislative attitudes, have been permitted to have a part in shaping legislation months after elections have been held. The practice has been responsible for a great deal of vicious legislation, particularly of the pork-barrel variety.

Common sense demands the passage of the Norris resolution. The old provision, fixing the date of the presidential inaugural as March of the next year following the election in November, and likewise extending the terms of congressmen to that date, was adopted at the beginning of this country's history. Transportation facilities were slow and uncertain. There was a reason for holding the inaugural months after election. That reason disappeared years ago.

THROUGH REPUBLICAN EYES.

Two able and devoted republican journals—The Chicago Tribune, and The Kansas City Star.—are giving much significance to the political aspects of this latest investigation of Teapot Dome.

The Tribune assumes that the leasing of the naval oil reserve by Fall to Harry Sinclair constitutes a black blot upon the record of the republican party. It declares that Harding's unfitness for office was recognized in 1920, but that in spite of it the national convention went ahead and nominated him with only a superficial scrutiny of the qualifications of candidates. It suggests the time is now ripe to avoid another blunder in the approaching convention to select candidates in 1928. Unless there is greater interest shown than at present, delegates will go to the convention to become the pawns of politicians just as a little gang put Harding across in 1920. Stranger things have happened, most of us will confess. There is good sense in the suggestion that sentiment be crystallized for some of the outstanding men mentioned in the news columns now, in order that it will not be possible to trot out a "dark horse" and jam him through an apathetic convention.

It is an entirely different matter which arouses the interest of The Kansas City Star. That journal of progressive republicanism makes much of the seeming innocent slip made by Colonel Stewart in testifying before the senate committee. Stewart had been asked whether he knew anyone who had gotten any of the Liberty bonds from the $3,000,000 pot which the Continental Trading company got out of the oil deal. Instead of denying it, he said he had never distributed any Liberty bonds to any political party or organization. Now he had not been asked whether any of them had gone to a political organization. The answer has revived the old rumor, The Star declares, that part of the bonds went to pay the deficit encountered in the campaign of 1920. That' no doubt, will furnish fuel for a great deal of fireworks.

EDUCATION FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

A fifth of the girls attending Northwestern university, questioned by a Chicago newspaper as to why they enrolled for college, answered they were there to "have a good time." Still a larger proportion, a fourth, admitted they were seeking a university degree because "everybody else came." A tenth of them confessed that the purpose which sent them to college was to "get a man."

This may be a true reflection of Northwestern university, although we doubt it, but it does not hold as to the University of Nebraska. A fourth of the young women enrolled there think highly enough of a university degree, and have sufficiently high purposes to inspire them to pay all or a part of their expenses. Some of these girls perform housework to meet a part of their expenses. More of them are employed in offices and business institutions. The point is that they not only carry heavy hours of school work, but they also undertake the burden of additional labors outside in order to gain a college education.

More and more young women attending the universities and colleges are there for the purpose of achieving economic independence. That does not mean they have become any the less domestically inclined—if the truth were known it is probable that most of them look forward to marriage and a home of their own with the same favor they formerly did—but at the same time they are determined they shall be able to support themselves should occasion arise. And as a result they are preparing themselves for the professions and for business and industrial activities. It is preposterous to suggest that the average young woman attending college has no more definite goal than to enjoy life. They are putting as much earnestness into their work as are the young men.

Feeding Democrats Raw Oratory.

He went back to chasing Indians

BY WILL ROGERS.

Well, all I know is just what I see in the papers, or what I hear as I sit behind the free lunch table, and listen to the boys bark for their meals. Did I ever tell you about the time I broke bread with the democrats in Washington? I passed myself off as a democrat one night just to get a free meal.

I had watched the republicans eat, but I never had seen them feed the democrats, so I crawled in under the tent and watched 'em throw the good old raw Jeffersonian oratory right into the cages with 'em. They call it a Jackson day dinner. I made the mistake of my life, I went there with a speech prepared about Jackson, telling how "He stood like a stone wall," and here it wasent that Jackson that they were using as an alabi to give the dinner to. It was old "Andy" Jackson. Well to tell you the truth I am not so sweet on old Andy. He is the one that run us Cherokees out of Georgia and North Carolina. I eat the dinner on him, but I didnent enjoy it. I thought I was eating for Stonewall. Old Andy, every time he couldent find anyone to jump on, would come back and pounce onto us Indians. Course he licked the English down in New Orleans, but he didn't do it till the war had been over two weeks, so he really just fought them as an encore. Then he would go to Florida and shoot up the Seminoles. That was before there was a bathing suit in Palm Beach. Then he would have a row with the government, and they would take his command and his liquor away from him, and he would come back and sick himself onto us Cherokees again.

Republicans Give Money.

He was the first one to think up the idea to promise everybody that if they will vote for you why you will give them an office when you get in, and the more times they vote for you the bigger the office you will give them. That was the real starting of the democratic party. It was called democratic because you was supposed to get something for your vote. Then the republicans come along and improved on the democrats and Jacksons idea, by giving them money instead of promise of jobs. In that way you got paid whether your man was elected or not. So naturally thats why more people are republicans than democrats. Nobody with any business sense wants to wait till after election to see if they get something. They liked the republican idea of "paying as you go."

But old Andy made the white house. He got in before the republicans got their scheme working. The Indians wanted him in there so he would let us alone for awhile. Andy stayed two terms, and was the first man that dident "choose" to run again. He had to get back to his regular business, which was shooting at the Indians. They were for a third term for Andy. They sent the Indians to Oklahoma; they had a treaty that said, "You shall have this land as long as grass grows and water flows." It was not only a good rhyme, but looked like a good treaty, and it was till they struck oil. Then the government took it away from us again. They said the treaty only refers to "water and grass, it dont say anything about oil."

So the Indians lost another bet. The first one wa sto Andrew Jackson, and the second was to Rockefeller, Doheny, Sinclair, and Socony. After the Cherokees went back and saw where they used to live in Georgia, North Carolina and Alabama, why we always felt that Andy had unconsciously done us a favor. For Georgia never was heard ofagain till Ty Cobb, North Carolina was in a rut till Lucky Strikes and Camels pulled them out and Alabama layed dormant till Tom Heflin made the first page for them. So we Cherokees can always kinder forgive old Andy for now knowing what he was doing. Got to give old Andy credit, he fought duels when duels was duels, and not just the inconvenience of getting up before sunrise.

Curtis Is Candidate.

Now we got an election coming along and us "Injuns" got an entry in the race. Its Charley Curtis, who was smart enough to live in a northern state, which is a physical hardship, but a political advantage. Charley has used awful good judgment in his presidential ambitions. Al Smith, and Jim Reed, and Doheny, and Ritchie, all have splendid qualifications, and have studied and acquired traits that will help them to the presidency, but Indian Charley Curtis with one swoop embraced a requriement that will be of more advantage in a presidential race than all the combined qualifications of the others I mentioned. He is a republican. Of course that ain't saying much. But its just that little thing that is lacking in any of these others that will be their principal handicap. So if we get Charley in there, we will see what he does for the Indians. I hope he don't send us back.

I thought at the time of the dinner that the democrats were going mighty far back to find some hero that they could worship. But I happened to be in Cuba when President Coolidge delivered his speech to the Latins, and the republicans had to go even further back than the democrats did for Jackson. He went back to Columbus. I had never heard Columbus's political faith discussed before. But he must have been a republican, the way Cal was boosting for him. So you see neither party hasent got much when they have to reach back that far to find some one to boost. The dinner started at 7 o'clock on Thursday, and run till 3 a. m. on Firday the 13th. We dident eat that long. We only eat as long as they brought it. They run out of food about 8 p. m. From then on you had to subsist on "prohibition, with or without a license," and "party Harmony". Jim Reed closed the show with 'Corruption" at exactly 3 a. m. the next morning and held em in their seats. You know the democrats can just naturally stand more oratory than any other race.

But it was all mighty fine. The democrats is just naturally a better orator than the republican. The democrats have the best side. They are always attacking, and the republicans have to defend. The democrats always have things to attack for the republicans furnish them plenty, and on the other hand the republicans havent got much to defend. Their only defense is, "We are in, try and get us out." So if you ever get a chance, don't miss one of these Jackson day dinners, they only hold em on election years. They save up four years stuff to tell about the republicans, and its sure worth the money.

Nebraska's Guide Post.

(St. Paul News.)

Nebraska is engaged in building an expensive and enduring capitol at Lincoln. Skilled workmen are fashioning with infinite care the stones that will go into parts of the structure. Two or three years will be consumed in the erection of the building but barring a catastrophe of some kind the capitol will last a century or more.

As is customary in buildings of this kind there will be an inscription carved in a conspicuous place in the building as a sort of governmental guide for the citizens. For that inscription Nebraska has chosen an appropriate and timely admonition. In bronze letters, 14 inches high and extending entirely around the frieze of the dome, 50 feet above the floor, may be read:

"He who would duly inquire about the best form of the state ought first to determine which is the most eligible life. Men should not think it slavery to live according to the constitution for it is their salvation. Laws and constitutions spring from the moral dispositions of the members of the state. Law and order deliver the soul. A community, like an individual, has a work to do."

Not a bad piece of advice to look up to and ponder.

Snuff Habit Won't Die.

(The New York Times.

Are the women of England going back to snuff? There are reports of an increasing demand for fancy snuffboxes in the upper circles of society. If true, they serve further to prove that mankind moves in circles of custom and habit. At all events, the snuff habit refuses to die; quantities of the powder are still consumed in various countries, including the United States.

In the eighteenth century snuff taking was as common as is cigaret smoking today, both men and women indulging in the habit freely. Men were won over to pipes and cigars, but women clung to their powdered tobacco, which was often perfumed, rose being a favorite flavor.

There were two methods followed in snuff taking. A pinch was breathed into the nostrils or snuff was rubbed on the gums with an elm stick.

Many snuffboxes were works of art—precious metals, jewels and miniature painting entering into their composition. The late J. Pierpont Morgan made a collection of these objets d'art. It was considered one of the finest collections ever assembled.

Do you not think it would be a good idea to teach in the public schools such subjects as history and the sciences by moving pictures? In the case of history, for example, would not a child more easily grasp an historical situation from not only reading about it, but from seeing it enacted through a moving picture?

Do you not think there is a great field for the moving picture industry in the realm of education?

Undoubtedly there is a large educational future for the motion picture, especially in the teaching of historical and scientific subjects. But pictures themselves are too fleeting to be an adequate method of instruction.

The subjects they set forth should be carefully studied before and after seeing their filming. "The King of Kings" is an instance in point. One who had never heard of Jesus would obtain from His presentation in this scenario a radiant conception of Him, but its appeal is far more powerful to those who are familiar with His life and doctrine.

The matter of expense is an important factor in educational pictures. They do not return their cost nearly so soon or surely as do those of high grade entertainment, and boards of education have not as yet provided for this contingency. But you may be sure that the time is near when a film equipment will be deemed essential in all public schools.

Boston, Mass.

Will you kindly explain the meaning of Tennyson's poem "Merlin and the Gleam"?

Just what does "Merlin" stand for in this particular connection and what is "the Gleam"?

Tennyson was the poet of the romantic, the chivalrous and the knightly. His poetry is conspicuous for its treatment of love as a pure flame of devotion to the highest things of life. His reverence for womanhood, his passion for the charms of nature, his old world courtesy, marked by conventionalism, his artistic sense, his feeling for creative values and, above all, his religious spirit, appear in his poems. They express these qualities with superb dignity of diction.

All are reflected in "Merlin and the Gleam." The laureate interpreted Merlin as the spirit of poetry and the Gleam as the higher poetic imagination. His interpretation is to be understood from the standpoint of culture and character and not merely of literature. He who follows the Gleam listens to the inward voice and is not disobedient to the heavenly vision of ideal perfection.

This truth is further brought out in "Idylls of the King." Arthur is the incarnation of the true, the good, the beautiful. The fall of the round table was due to the moral failure of some who sat about it.

Unless we keep tryst with Tennyson's ideal, which is fully realized in Christ, "that purest light of God," we shall be worsted by the warring elements of the flesh. No lesson is more needed in our day of Bohemian misadventures. The call is to chivalrous knighthood and to the practice of those virtues which make for genuine Christian manhood.

Is not religion decaying? Have not the churches failed to maintain their hold? I believe this is the case and that the foundations of your various faiths are shaken. Please tell us candidly what you think.

I do so with pleasure. Religion was never more vital and active than now. A single sermon by Bishop Barnes, of Birmingham, England, on the relation of the Darwinian theory of evolution to the teachings of the Bible recently aroused all Britain. The newspapers were deluged with letters discussing it from various viewpoints. They demonstrate that the Christian faith is woven into the fiber of the nation.

The Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., did the same thing for the United States. A trifling incident in itself, nevertheless it involved the rights of reason, faith and conscience, whereupon the petty action of a rural board of education and its consequences were transmitted to the ends of the earth.

There is a fixed gulf between militant materialists and believers in a divine order. But the great body of intelligent public opinion has no acute difficulty in retaining firm faith in that order while frankly facing every hypothesis of science. Theologies will be recast. Famous Pets of Famous People

The Raven Which Helped Charles Dickens to Make Barnaby Rudge a Success.

"But Grip did not grow better"

BY PRESTON WRIGHT.

When Charles Dickens went to live at Devonshire Terrace, one of the earliest additions to the household was a raven.

Everybody who has read Barnaby Rudge knows this bird. It was Grip, the almost human companion of Barnaby.

Barnaby Rudge had been under way for some time, before the author decided to include in it a literary photograph of his own bird. But by January, 1841, his mind was made up. He would make the raven which in life as well as in the book was named Grip, a prominent figure in Barnaby.

Grip was himself responible for the fame that thus came to him. Ove a period of a year he had been developing accomplishments of a nature that brough great mirth, delight and interest to the whole Dickens menage. His was just the silhouette that appealed to the author's imagination and so he earned inclusion in the story.

Toward the close of February, Dickens wrote that the story was taking great strides and expressed it as his opinion that "Grip will be strong." So it turned out to be.

But in the midst of things tragedy suddenly developed. Returning from Brighton, where he had gone for a week of quiet work, Dickens found Grip ailing.

Topping, his groom, reported that the raven had lost all his customary mirthfulness and was, contrary to habit, extremely quiet.

Remembering that during the previous summer the raven had swallowed a quantity of white paint, but had recovered nicely. Dickens was not worried. But Grip did not grow better. Immediately this was reported to him the author sent for a doctor. It was too late, Grip passed out.

"You will be greatly shocked," wrote Dickens to John Forster, later his biographer, and to Daniel Maclise, the artist, "and grieved to hear that the Raven is no more. He expired today (March 12, 1841) at a few minutes after noon.

"Yesterday he was taken so much worse that I sent an express for the medical gentleman (Mr. Herring) who administered a powerful dose of castor oil. Under the influence of this medicine, he recovered so far as to be able at 8 o'clock p. m. to bite Topping. His night was peaceful. This morning at daybreak he appeared better; received (agreeably to the doctor's orders) another dose of castor oil; and partook plentifully of some warm gruel, the flavor of which he appeared to relish.

"Toward 11 o'clock he was so much worse that it was found nescesary to muffle the stable-knocker. At half-past he was heard talking to himself about the horse and Topping's family, and to add some incoherent expressions which are supposed to have been either a foreboding of his approaching dissolution, or some wishes relative to the disposal of his little property: consisting chiefly of half-pence which he had buried in different parts of the garden.

"On the clock striking twelve he appeared slightly agitated, but he soon recovered, walked twice or thrice along the coach-house, stopped to bark, staggered, exclaimed "Halloa old girl!' (His favorite expression) and died.

"He hebaved throughout with decent fortitude. . . . I deeply regret that being in ignorance of his danger, I did not attend to receive his last instructons.

'Something remarkable about his eyes occasioned Topping to run for the doctor at 12. When they returned together our friend was gone.

"The medical gentleman informed me of his decease with great caution and delicacy, preparing me by the remark that 'a jolly queer start had taken place'; but the shock was very great notwithstanding."

Dickens directed that Grip should have a post-mortem examination, suspecting that he had been poisoned; but nothing came of it.

His children appear to have been rather glad that Grip had departed. He bit their ankles. However, it was necessary that Dickens should have another of these birds which he might continue to study for the benefit of the raven in Barnaby Rudge. So one soon was obtained and installed in the stable.

But the first was not forgotten. His stuffed remains, in a glass case, were placed in Dickens' study as a permanent ornament.

Maclise further perpeuated his fame by drawing an apotheosis representing the white spirit of the poor black Grip ascending to a ravens' heaven.

The second raven died in 1845. He too had indulged a sinful taste for paint and putty. But he was more voracious than his predecessor.

Even as death hung over him, he was tantalizing his appetite. The end came suddenly as he was standing before the kitchen fire.

"He kept his eye to the last upon the meat as it roasted," wrote Dickens to Forster" and suddenly turned over on his back with a sepulchral 'Cuckoo,!"

College View Man Worked Beside Famous Harry Lauder In Coal Mines of Scotland

When James Rodney worked in the mines of the Black Country of west Scotland, the lad working by his side was just another miner, as he himself was, as were dozens of other men who earned their living in the center of the country's coal district.

The work was hard. The hours were long. The days were monotonous. The men grew inexpressably weary.

Pick! Pick! Pick! Working the coal out of the resisting seam. Bending every effort toward a maximum amount. Straining every muscle to work out the black seam. The greater the effort, the greater the quantity to go to the surface. The greater the quantity, the greater the number of shillings at the end of the week.

The miners sang. They sang the often weird, generally sad, songs of Scotland, with the violent, abrupt modulations of its music.

Some of the men just rumbled along, unconsciously suiting their deep bass to the swinging of their shoulders. Some followed a little off key, but enjoying their own accompaniment to their labors. Some were really fine singers.

But they all sang—the miners of Scotland.

And they at first paid scant attention to the boy who sang with so true a sense of pitch. He sang and he hummed from dawn till dark, but that aroused scant attention among the men.

If that man had other dreams then, of fame in a world far, far from the Scottish mines, no one knew it. He was just one of them, perhaps more musical, perhaps with a cleverer tongue, but Harry was not in those early days marked off from the group.

That he would some day be knighted. That he would attract great audiences. That he would make kings and presidents laugh. No one knew it. No one even thought of such a possibility.

For in those days, James Rodney, who now operates his own oil station in College View, and Harry Lauder, now Sir Harry Lauder, were both working in the depths of the Eddlewood colliery in Eddelwood, Hamilton, Lanarkshire, Scotland.

Worked With Lauder.

Mr. Rodney knew Harry Lauder for eight or ten years, and worked beside him in the mines for half that time. Eddelwood, the mine giving its name to one section of the town, as there were dozens and dozens of pits within a mile or two of the center of the town, was Mr. Rodney's home. Harry Lauder, with his mother and younger brothers and sisters had come there at the insistence of his mother's brother, feeling that the young Harry, practically the sole support of the family could find work more easily there than in the north of England, where they had been.

Even before Mr. Rodney knew Harry Lauder, he knew "Nance's" family—Harry Lauder's wife, to whom he so often refers in his present autobiography and who has so recently died. The Vallances lived in Low Waters, which was just a step or two from Eddelwood. Before leaving Eddelwood, he also knew "Nance," but he lived close to her family before he knew the girl.

In his autobiography, Harry Lauder speaks of Rab McBeth, who later greeted him in St. Louis. Mr. Rodney laughs when he mentions his name, for he knew him in the Eddelwood days, and knows him to be the same character, who was one of Harry Lauder's first gaffers in the mines, and who, he says, kept in him his determination to keep singing, after he had started.

Much In Demand.

After it was found that Harry Lauder had a voice and a clever manner, that he was "a wee comic," various meetings sought him out for the programs. He always sang at miners' meetings, and was a good natured person, giving several encores.

"Harry was always friendly," Mr. Rodney says.

"He never got the big head, even after he had come back from his successful tour with MacKenzie Murdoch, the great Scotch violinist. I saw him after he became really popular, and he hadn't changed in his manner."

About the first time Mr. Rodney heard him professionally—and that was long before his days of fame—Harry Lauder sang in the Hamilton Victoria hall. He chose an Irish

On the bonny banks of Clyde, later to be made so famous by the song of one, James Rodney and Harry Lauder once worked and sang together. Mr. Rodney, whose home is in College View, has been in this country for nearly a quarter of a century, but he yet has pleasant memories of the Scotch comedian, whom he knew so well in Scotland.

character song, "Callaghen," although up until that time he had made his local fame on sentimental songs.

"He was a fine singer of sentimental songs," Mr. Rodney says.

As Mr. Rodney recalls, the words of the prize-winning song were as follows:

"Callaghen, you'll have to call again,
Says Callaghen, 'Call Again!' Not I!"
But my temper rose
And then says I to Callaghen
"You'll have to call again
If you want your M-O-N-E-Y!"

Natural Comedian.

At that time, he was still in the mines, because "a miner never thinks he'll be anything but a miner." From that time on, however, he had occasional night engagements in the nearby towns, and after that time, it is probable he aspired to capitalize his talents. In those days, Harry Lauder had not Anglicized his Scotch, and so varied were the Scotch dialects that it was difficult for persons in different sections of the country to understand him, and his songs would have meant little or nothing to an English audience.

"Harry Lauder is just a natural comic, however," in Mr. Rodney's opinion.

"He looks it and he acts it. It was amusing just to be around him in the evenings."

Mr. Rodney tells an interesting story of Harry Lauder's first appearance in London. It had always been difficult for Scotch talent to be recognized in the English city. After his successful Scotch tours, Harry Lauder had appeared in Liverpool, receiving great acclaim, and he aspired to try his luck in London.

His agent refused to try to book him, knowing of the city's attitude toward Scotch performers. London agents were doubtful about booking a new, young comedian.

Finally, Harry Lauder went to London, and managed to secure an engagement for himself. He was an instantaneous success, and from that day, his fame grew apace.

His song was "The Horse Kiltie." Mounted on a frisky horse, it became excited and jumped into the orchestra pit.

The story got about, and all London went to see the Scotchman in kilts on horseback.

RADIOGRAMS

Ringing Noise Caused by Detector Tube.

Some tubes and receivers are particularly susceptible to vibration, and even the vibration of the air caused by the proximity of the loudspeaker may cause a loud constant howl to be built up, which will only stop when the loudspeaker is turned around or moved farther away from the receiver. Such action is called "microphonic" and the trouble is usually found to lie in the detector tube. The use of another tube for the detector may eliminate this trouble or the installation of metal and rubber caps which are helpful when placed on the detector tube. Microphonic trouble is sometimes caused by turning the detector rheostat too low and will disappear when turned up to normal. Cushion sockets are helpful and their action may sometimes be improved by not inserting the tube all the way, but instead just far enough to make good contact.

Cross-Talk Difficult to Trace.

"Innocent" stations often are blamed by radio listeners for interference caused by some other broadcaster. Stations operating faithfully on their assigned frequencies in adjoining channels frequently are accused of causing heterodynes they do not produce. Heterodynes will occur even though the interfering station is far away from the desired station. Sometimes the heterodyne note can be heard when listening to a station and no trace of the interfering station can be found after the desired station ceases to operate.

Albania Students Send A Portfolio Of Customs And Life To Nebraska School

Albania isn't just a name to the boys and girls of the American Red Cross.

It is more than a far away country in the Balkans, which has suffered from the periodic wars that have engaged that part of the world.

To thousands of children enrolled in the Junior Red Cross, the country is very real, because they are helping to build a new republic in the Balkans. It is being done through the modern education of its 'teen age children, as part of the national program of the Red Cross children.

The children of the Clay Center, Neb., school are taking an unusually keen interest in their friends across the sea, because they have just received a portfolio from a group of Albanian children, telling of their life and their customs, as well as of their town and their country. Although volumes of similar nature have been received by other schools, this is said to be the finest type of portfolios prepared by foreign-born children for American school boys and girls.

Some time ago, when the American Red Cross was administering after-war relief in the Balkans, the orphans and refugee children of the Albanian towns were cared for by the contributions of other children, those of the American Junior Red Cross. Albania at that time was just emerging from five centuries of Turkish rule, but it had maintained its national identity, and its people were both intelligent and eager.

Eager for education, the country nevertheless was poorly equipped with schools of any type, and there was no industrial or technical schools, where young boys could learn to use the tools of a trade.

The government at the time was too poor to furnish any sort of institution. It had been retarded, too, in its national life, but modern methods would do much to enrich the country, fairly rich in natural resources. The thought was, likewise, that a soundly financed and modern Albania would contribute to peace in the Balkans, and peace in the Balkans would have its share in world peace.

After study and debate for a prolonged period, in July, 1921, a vocational school for fifty Albanian students was opened at Tirana. Mechanics, carpentry, electricity, and agriculture were offered to the boys, who displayed the greatest eagerness for education, and who often underwent great physical hardship to enroll. Because of the interest, arrangements were made for sixty students, and more than one hundred were refused.

Inadequate, without proper place for the installation of machinery, the school managed to survive the first year. Because it believed in the project, the Albanian college, begun by the Young Turks in 1910 as a compensation to the Albanians for their part in the Young Turk movement, was given to the school. The war of 1912 had stopped work on the structure, but through the combined efforts of interested persons, the building, the finest in the capital, was completed.

The school now has an enrollment of 180 students, with a faculty of sixteen, including the director, H. T. Pultz, an Indianan. Classes are in English, one of the original provisions of the school, partly because its support is from English speaking children and partly because the language has no terminology for American tools, the basis of the work in the schools.

It is this school, with its so-eager students and its infinite possibilities, that the children of the American Red Cross, through the National children's fund, made of volunteer contributions, are helping to support. In 1922, $150,000 was sent for the support of the school by the Junior Red Cross. The organization annually sends $20,000 to the institution, once characterized as one of the most remarkable schools in southeastern Europe.

To foster understanding and appreciation of the children of the countries in which the Junior Red Cross is interested, the organization has developed the international school correspondence plan. In this fashion, the children exchange letters and materials that bind the schools together.

This portfolio, dedicated "To The Boys and Girls of the Public Schools Clay Center Nebraska—From the Boys of the Albanian Vocational School Tirana, Albania" is a most interesting affair. The English is excellent, almost poetical at times, the writing better than is done by some American pupils, or adults, and the art work clever.

The volume was sent to Miss Daphne M. Dodds, general field representative for Nebraska for the American Red Cross. She will present it to the Clay Center school. According to Miss Dodds, this is the first one to be written in English by the pupils, without any interpretative translations from the instructors, and that it is unusually excellent in correlating history, geography, English, nature study, art, manual training, and recreation activities.

In the portfolio, the title page has a water color drawing of the Tirana school, done by one of the

Neat Gravestones And Flowers Soon To Beautify Bleak Prison Burial Grounds

The penitentiary cemetery as it looks with new gravestones. Warden Fenton plans other improvements.

Overlooking the grey walls wherein they spent their last days as men, the bones of thirty-eight convicts lie beneath a bleak prairie hillside, south of Lancaster penitentiary.

In neat alignment, like prison cells, the graves stretch in parallel rows from one end to the other of the acre lot. Half-sunken, unmarked grass-grown, they have for two-score years formed an outpost to "the city of silent men."

But this is all to be changed—is half changed now.

Neat white head stones or simple, nameless markers have been erected at practically all the burial places. The graves have been mounded, the grass cut and burned. Before this summer passes the whole acre will be sodded and flower beds planted.

Warden Fenton is responsible for the improvement. By the time these changes have been made and the lot enclosed by a neat white fence to replace the barnyard variety now in use, he believes the cemetery will be a show spot.

Most of the thirty-eight graves have been dug during Mr. Fenton's service as warden, so he can personally remember a large share of the names of the dead.

For these, cement slabs, finished with smooth white surfaces and based on brick work foundations, are erected. In the slab is an inset where one may read on a typewritten slip, placed beneath glass, the name and number and date of death of the deceased.

Are Nameless.

Other graves whose denizens are not now recalled are being marked by a simple cross, also of a permanent nature.

Two graves in the inclosure still have the old stone markers placed there thirty years ago or more. Both are near the northwest corner of the cemetery. One, a carved marble block resting on limestone, bears the inscription, "A. Brock. Died September 10, 1895. Age 21 years." The other, also of marble, is rudely scratched with: "Powell. Died January 10, 1893."

In one of these places, Warden Fenton has heard, lies the remains of a man who tried to escape the institution and drowned in a river during the attempt.

The modern type of inscription is: "Henry C. Bartlett. No. 9171. Electrocuted April 9, 1927. Age 37."

The FATIGUE TEST for TONE

A person with astigmatism may be able to read a page of print and scarcely realize he has an eye defect—but after a while the eye is tired by the unnatural effort. One may hear a Receiver with tone that is not natural and scarcely realize that the tone is wrong—but after a time he becomes tired of listening.

Apply the fatigue test when you are buying a Receiver to make sure of the tone quality.

Listen steadily for two or three hours; the Receiver with inferior tone — tone that is not "right"—will fatigue you. Listen to a Stromberg-Carlson for the same length of time and you will find it does not tire you because the tone is natural.

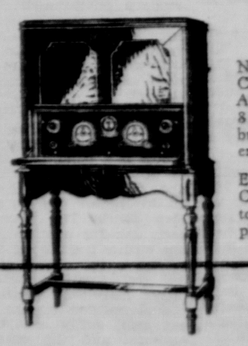

Your nearest Stromberg-Carlson dealer's address may be learned from his advertisements in your newspapers or in your telephone directory.

The Theatres

—In, Out and Around Broadway

By BRADLEY KELLY

The Passng of the "Chorus Girl."

For many years Mike Shanahan has been the burly guardian of the Winter Garden stage door. "Sure and a quiet existence it is," asserts Mike, "with few of them thrills you read about in the Sunday nooshpapers." But now and then a lusty hair-pulling battle between jealous "chorines," a group of noisy college students or an over-zealous millionaire looking for "the second blonde from the right" brings Mike out of his easy chair inside the door.

"The shock of me life," confides Mike, "was the other night when one o' them 'Silk-Hat Harry' guys bangs on the door with his cane. 'Come in!' says I. 'Sure, what's on your mind, Mister?'

"'I'm waitin' for a friend,' says he.

"'Who is she?' says I.

"'One of the 'ladies of the ensemble,"' says he.

"'This is a musical show,' says I. 'It ain't no ladies assembly.'

"Then he laughs at that and shows me the name. 'Sure, it's one of the chorus girls you're after,' I says.

"'You're behind the times,' says he, 'the chorus girl has passed.'

"And sure enough he was right, she's now a 'lady' on the program.

Along with the passing of the Broadway "chorus girl," the "janitor" retires for the "caretaker," the "barber" for the "coffeur," and 'lunch room owners" are restaurateurs."

Even the old-time "Pool Room" has been replaced by the "Billiard Academy."

"All Fresh Here! On'y Twenny Fi' Cents!"

"Millions for candy—but not a single bon bon in the theatre!"

That would seem to be the dictum of New York theatregoers. A government survey shows New York leading the country in candy consumption—more than $36,000,000 being spent in 1926 for sweets. Yet every Manhattanite knows "it just isn't done in the theatre."

For instance, seat holders in the lower orchestra of the Metropolitan for Marie Jeritza's recent "Carmen" premier were greatly distressed by "that awful fat lady eating chocolates." The fierce looks this unperturbed "sweet tooth" received would have discouraged a less hardened bon bon eater. But even the verbal shafts of sarcasm aimed at her seemed only to rustle the loose papers of her candy box, as she continued her feast, munching in time with the music.

Of course it wasn't always thus. For a theatre party back in the "gay nineties," a young man called in a hansom cab with violets and candy. But that was when $25 allowed an elaborate evening—dinner at the Waldorf, opera stalls, a bite of supper at Sherry's and the cab. Today the same sum looks like a grain of sand on the bench of Broadway night life.

Good News for the Sugar Daddies.

"Sir

When I visited New York recently, I noticed the new fad in specialty stores—the maple sugar candy shops. Patrons of these stores are warned to lay in a stock of maple sugar specialties now, for we Vermonters expect a syrup shortage shortly. Why? Well, you see it's like this: The Sap Does Not Choose to Run.

"Old Vermonter."

Chaplin "Clowns Only at Social Gatherings.

A pair of baggy trousers, an elastic cane, an inelegant derby and two old shoes have proved a magnet for Broadway crowds the past two weeks. These articles are the original costume of Charlie Chaplin now on exhibition in one of Gimbel's store wndows.

Strangely enough, Chaplin, the genius of the screen never clowns in pictures. It is only at social gatherings that this unmasked clown ever "clowns." The writer remembers well the first time he saw Chapin in person. It was Old Timers' Night at the New York Newspaper Club when the veteran white-haired journalists of the Metropolitan dailies gather for an evening's entertainment. It is the occasion for the best talent of the Broadway theatres to "strut their stuff," and the program is usually of the highest order.

A young singer had just finished a number when suddenly a shout was heard in one corner of the crowded club room. A slightly-built, dark-haired chap with sad-blue eyes and a winsome smile that was instantly identified as belonging to the one and only Charlie Chaplin was hoisted atop a table. All the gathering stood and for several minutes gave Chaplin a rousing ovation of deafening cheers and applause. It is seldom one finds newspaper men unanimously and genuinely enthusiastic about a "celebrity."

Chaplin appeared grateful. He uttered a few words of thanks. Then as if to show his appreciation he mounted the platform and "clowned." With not even his screen mustache for make-up, he gave for the first time his pantomine "The Tortador."

Mumbling words that were neither Spanish, nor English, nor Greek, he portrayed the engaged bucking bull, the nimble-footed and startled toreador and the fair lady in the box, all the time holding his audience spellbound by the superb artistry of his pantomime.

At the end of his novel act another roar greeted him. If there were many "doubting Thomases" present that night, they were convinced of Chaplin's rare genius. And one of them was the present writer.

The Movies Get it Again.

At a welfare convention held recently in New York, the movies were blamed for the prevalence of juvenile crime. Anent this situation my friend Edward Anthony, Broadway poet and playwright, when asked his views, contributed the following poem to this greatful column:

"Stiletta Tommy, sometimes known as Nick the Gizard-slicer.
Once tried as Dave the Dip and once as Lou the Loaded-dicer,
It's charged you burglarized this man and hit him on the head,
And a dozen other things," His Honor gravely said.
Attorney for defense arose a person debonair,
And offered these remarks the while he stroked the prisoner's hair;
"He was the nicest gentleman
That I had ever seen
Until the time he saw a crime
Depicted on the screen.
A-stealing's not his business, sir,
'Tis just an avocation
That he acquired when worries fired
His young imagination!"
"There's something in your argument; release the man, attendant
And now we'll hear the Pinto Kid
Well, what's your plea, defendant?
You're charged with robbing twenty banks and holding up a train.
These wretched improprieties I wish you would explain."
And when the Kid's attorney made the moving plea below
I knew the kindly magistrate would let the prisoner go:
"He learned it in the movies, sir,
The chap was minus malice
Till led astray the other day
In Blooey's movie palace.
'Twas poison in his gentle soul,
Temptation came a-leaping!
Ah, set him free, poor fellow; see
How tenderly he's weeping!"

"That all may be true," said a philosophic movie magnate as he persued the above, "but I've heard it said that crime antedated the movies."

Manhattan Aisles.

"Paris Bound" with Madge Kennedy, continues to amuse packed houses at the Music Box. It is the story, smartly played, of a young maried pair who stay married in spite of the husband's "affair" with one of the bridesmaids. Hope Williams, a modern boyish blonde who stepped from society to the stage, and is very easy to look at, makes a decided hit, while Edwin Nicander as the bounder draws rounds of laughter with his well-chosen wisecrack lines.

Walter Hampden, soon to open in "Henry V," is now appearing in a revival of last year's success, "Caponsacchi." Hampden, as Caponsacchi the romantic priest gives his customary finished performance and Edith Barrett supplies a talented portrayal of Pompilia, the angelic wife of the scoundrel Guido. This play which is set in Italy of the 17th Century and based on Robert Brownings poem "The Ring and the Book," has brought the following inquiry to this column: "Was 'Caponsacchi' written by Peaches Browning's Cinderella Man?"

The Great White Way has been invaded by a Presidential candidate who evidently hasn't heard of Mayor Walker's 3 a. m. curfew ruling. Next to the Guild Theater on West 52nd street where "Marco Millions" and "The Doctor's Dilemma" alternate weekly, is a large window sign announcing the candidacy of Senator Curtis of Kansas —"Open 24 Hours a Day."

Who has "perfect legs?" A press notice states that Camille Lenier, recently imported from the Paris Folies Bergere to decorate the chorus of "The Five O'clock Girl," is the guilty party. It was Mistinguette, once heralded on Broadway as "the girl with the million dollar legs," who inspired the query from a veteran first-nighter—"Was that dollars or francs?"

This week another record fell. Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis in the modern dress version of "The Taming of the Shrew" played their 122nd performance at the Garrick Theatre topping the run of 121 made 41 years ago by John Drew and Ada Rehan under the direction of Augustin Daly.

"Black Belt," a new play coming to Broadway depicts the life of a colored family that moved from Carolina to Harlem. The cast will me peopled mostly by colored performers. The piece was written by William Jordan Rapp, long a traveler and writer of the Near East, Turkish harem life, etc., in collaboration with Wallace Thurman, a young negro writer-actor who appeared for a time in "Porgy."

Alexander Moissi, featured player of the Max Reinhardt group just closing their season with Tolstoi's "The Living Corpse," was born in Trieste of Albanian parents—Albania being the tiny Balkan nation where real romance still lurks in the absence of a written language.

will have to restate or recant their respective positions. But the grand verities of religion remain unshaken and unshakeable.

These verities do not depend on magic, force or superstitious fear. They are not hangovers from a primeval past of darkest ignorance nor the lingering fringe of a black belt of despair and delusion. Their inestimable services make Biblical teachings the sole alternative to world-wide catastrophe. The controversies raging around them will ultimately clear and leave their central purposes secure and resplendent. They are the spiritual essentials of man's unconquerable mind.

pupils. The following page has a photograph of Suleman's mosque, and the next a general view of Tirana in spring. The history of Tirana, which means to spin, is written by Kocho P. Harizi, "student in The Albanian Vocational School—Tirana, Albania, Europe." His story is illustrated with interesting views of the city, and he takes up the location, climate, streets, bridges, rivers, mountains, churches and mosques, national buildings, agriculture, trade, imports and exports, transportation, manufacturing and industry, factories, each under its own head.

A typical Albanian scene is shown just before the dedicatory page, which is decorated with a large Red Cross by some pupil. On the other side are the names of the Clay Centre and the Tirana children who have been exchanging letters about their school life and work, and the strange unique customs of each other's countries. At the bottom of the page is a design, with the words "The Book of Friendship —Albania and America.

THE LITERARY SENSATIONS OF 1929

A Confidential Guide to the New Books

Now that the year 1928 is upon us—so far upon us—it is time for publishing houses to make their book announcements for 1929. As a result of enquiries made to a number of leading firms, therefore, I am able to make known to readers of this journal that the literary output of the year now opening—in the publishing calendar—is likely to exceed in brilliance anything accomplished in the past.

The publishers, themselves, usually so reticent about the merit of their own books, admit that they never saw a brighter prospect. In nearly every department of literature, from children's books down to fundamentalism, the year promises extraordinary sensations.

For example, in the realm of children's literature itself a special feature will be the addition of one more notable book to those written by mere children but read with delight by young and old. This little volume, entitled Willie Nut; His Book, will take its place at once not only in child literature but in the literature of nuts. It is the work of one who is not merely a child, but who is, to all intents and purposes, a complete imbecile.

Willie Nut was discovered last year. In fact, I found him. The story of my discovery of Willie is quite simple, and may be related in a few words. I came across him in the course of an afternoon walk in the country. The child, whose home is of the humblest, was cutting wood in the yard with a buck saw. Something in the extraordinary simplicity of the boy's big face and the length of his ears attracted my attention. "Surely," I said, half aloud to myself, "this boy must have written a book. He has all the marks of it."

At the word 'book," I saw a big tear rise in the boy's eye. "Oh, sir!" he said, "do you think you could possibly get a New York firm to publish it?" Then he added modestly, as his head drooped over the saw, "I wrote it only for myself, sir, but if there is any money in publishing it, count me in."

In a few hours I was speeding to New York with the bulky MS. (Willie wrote on all paper) in my valise. The first publisher to hom I showed it declared it at once (without reading it) to be the most remarkable story of the century.

I must not anticipate the success of the book by quoting it here. Suffice it to say that it contains simply the thoughts of a child, such as a child would think when thinking in its own childlike way. To that extent the book reproduces merely the work of the other child prodigies of 1927 and the years preceding. But the interesting point of difference is that Willie Nut is half-witted. The others were not even that.

This point is clearly established by the following sworn certificate which accompanies Willie's work. It is from his pastor:

Certificate from Willie's Pastor.

I cheerfully certify that so far as I have observed him, Willie Nut has always appeared to me to be three-quarters deficient. I am delighted to learn that it has transpired that he possesses a literary genius of the highest order.

(Signed) (Rev.) Ebeneza Ebron.

Post Script. I think that seven-eighths would be a more exact estimate.

Closely connected with this class of literature are the beautiufily illustrated fairy-tales, which constitute a unique feature among the books of today. The only objection to these is the past has been that in the course of centuries the material has worn a little thin and the old-world setting no longer appeals to the children of the present. In spite of the beautiful illustrations, they turn away from such ancient stories as The Sleeping Beauty in the Wood and Beauty and the Beast in search of a more modern environment.

To meet this difficulty, a leading New York house (who specially requests me not to name them) will bring out an up-to-date volume of revised stories under the title of Fifth Avenue Fairy Stories.

The titles of the collection speak for themselves. Beauty and the Boost is a delightful story, modeled on an old favorite. A rich merchant of Oneonta, N. Y., sets out in his motor car on a journey to New York. His three daughters each ask for a present. The first one wishes a diamond sunburst, the second a fur coat, but the youngest and most beautiful asks her father merely to secure her a theatrical position on the stage. The merchant easily buys the diamond sunburst and the coat, but is in deep perplexity how to obtain the theatrical position. Pondering over this in his car, in a fit of abstraction he runs over a man on Fifth Avenue and is put in jail for damaging the sidewalk. His daughter, on hearing this, rushes to his side. In the police court, she sees the man whom he ran over, that is, over whom he ran. The latter falls in love with her and dismisses his complaint. In gratitude she accepts his hand and he turns out to be a theatrical producer.

Of equal merit, perhaps, is Jack the Joint-Killer. It appears that Jack, after having killed the Welsh giant with three heads, was engaged to enforce the Volstead Act. In doing this, he got acquainted with practically all the joints in New York.

I leave to the reader's own perusal The Sleeping Beauty in Wood Alcohol, The Old Woman who lived in the Soo (on the Canadian side and unable to bring her children into the United States); Jack and the Bean Head, and many other charming old stories now at last presented in a readable form.

"The whole of Gladstone's Egyptian policy was really based on conversation with Lady X across a tennis net."

More English Revelations.

Another welcome feature will be a further series of English biographies and memoirs, throwing into a stronger light than ever the Victorian Period. The tremendous success of the Confidential Memoirs of Lady C. and Mrs. A. and the Diary of Lord C. has encouraged other leaders of society to follow in their tracks. The brilliant and vivacious Lady X (aged 70; said to be the most beautiful woman in England) will be first in the field. Her autobiography will contain the most astounding revelations. It appears that not only was Disraeli (of whose perfervid nature it might be expected) wildly in love with her, but also, Mr. Gladstone and John Bright. Gladstone, it seems, was once indiscreet enough to write to her: "Dear Little Goo-Goo: Meet me tonight at half after midnight at the door of the House of Commons and come and eat supper at the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria. I will be wearing a pair of gray trousers with a wide check. A thousand kisses."

Even more interesting is the political side of Lady X's memoirs. The reader simply gasps for breath at the revelations that are made of the inner workings of English political life. It appears that the whole of Gladstone's Egyptian policy was really based on conversation with Lady X across a tennis net. Lord Salisbury was sent to the Congress of Berlin because the Queen thought he looked better in a top hat than any other available person. Lord Randolph Churchill always carried peanuts in his pockets. Nor is the book, brilliant and witty as is every page of it, a work lacking in sound and serious thought. "It seems to me," writes Lady X, "that America has a great future before it," and again, "I fear that there is an essential difference between the Orientals and ourselves."

But lack of space compels me to leave over for another time the further announcements of The Literary Sensations of the coming year.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—Whew! 1928! I can't realize it. As I was thinking of the resolutions I was making, it seemed as if most of them were foolish, but the last but not least I have resolved to write to you every three months, so I guess you will hear from me regularly now; that is, if you don't mind. Of course I'm bubbling over with questions.

Will you please tell me all you can about Lois Moran, Richard Arlen and Bebe Daniels?

What is the average age of movie stars? I have heard that most movie actors have either blond hair and brown eyes or dark hair with brown eyes. Is this true? I have heard they screen better.

What is the address of Lois Moran, Marceline Day, Evelyn Brent, Lila Lee and Lillian Gish?

By the way, what is Lila Lee doing now? Two or three years ago I used to see her so much.

I wonder if you could inform me who gets the largest and lowest salaries among the stars and how much it is?

Thanking you in advance, I must bid you adieu. BLUE EYES.

Oh, Oh! I see where I get some mail now, if you don't slip up on your resolution.

Allow me to present Miss Lois Moran—another one of those blonde ladies. She will cast her first vote in the presidential election next fall and she's been a featured player for the past two years. But Lois has a wise mamma. Instead of making the weary rounds of the casting offices with Lois, she gave her an artistic education and then awaited the results.

Lois was dancing in the ballet of the Paris Opera when she got her first "break" with a French movie producer. Samuel Goldwyn, who is always on the look-out for new material and seems to have a penchant for girls of the blonde type, spied Lois in one of her French pictures and decided he must have her for his own productions. Of course, Lois couldn't turn down an opportunity of that sort, so she came to America for the role of "Laurel" in "Stella Dallas." She hasn't had many idle days since, either, even if she did bob her hair and refuse to remain the little old fashioned girl that Mr. Goldwyn wanted her to be. At present she is on the Fox lot, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

Richard Arlen may look a little like a foreigner with his dark hair and eyes, but he's an American gentleman from the south. When he was only fifteen he ran away from home and joined the flying corps.

The Texas oil fields followed the battle field and Richard drove a truck instead of a plane.

California called, and Richard answered. For several months he drove trucks about the motion picture lots, delivering movie films from one studio to another. Then he decided it was easier work to follow the "extra" line. His break came in "In the Name of Love," and now Richard is very much at home in the Paramount studio where he plays featured roles. He is married to Jobyna Ralston.

No wonder Bebe Daniels could enact the role of a Spanish dandy so well in "Senorita." It was only the blood of her ancestors asserting itself, because Bebe is a descendant of a royal Spanish family. Her maternal great-grandfather was governor of Colombia, and her grandfather was the American consul at Buenos Aires for a number of years. Bebe has the clear olive skin and black hair and eyes of the Spaniard.

She has grown up in the films. Her first screen role was when she was only eight years old for Selig. She returned to the stage for a period after that and then appeared with Harold Lloyd as leading lady in his Rolin-Pathe comedies.

It was Cecil B. De Mille who gave Bebe her first start in dramatic roles when he cast her as the court favorite in "Male and Female," when he was a director for Paramount. Bebe has been with that company ever since, except for a short time when she starred in Realart productions. That company was afterward absorbed by Paramount and Bebe returned as a featured player. She is one of the leading stars on that lot and has built her own private dressing room or rather bungalow, there.

Bebe is very athletic, a good rider and likewise a good driver.

Youth reigns supreme in the movies today. The old players seem to be replaced with younger ones as soon as their contracts are up. Not only because of the call of youth, but for economical reasons. The younger players have not yet become so popular that they can demand an exorbitant wage and that adds to their appeal to the producer. A great many of the new stars of the present day are in their 'teens and early twenties.

It is true that the first thing that calls the attention of the cameraman to a player is the color of the eyes. Dark eyes, no matter whether they are black, brown, dark blue or dark gray, will photograph well, but light gray and blue eyes are a source of constant worry from the photograper's point of view. They photograph so nearly white, and often lack expression and appear wish-washy.

Blond hair casts an aura about a player that dark hair cannot attain, so blonde hair and dark eyes are a perfect combination, if you have them. Very few, however, answer that qualification. Make-up does wonders and the camera has an art of finding qualities in the face that cannot be seen by the naked eye, so it all depends upon the underlying characteristics whether or not a subject will present a pleasing motion picture countenance and personality as to just how far he will get toward stardom. A great many of the famous beauties have failed to become motion picture stars because they were found wanting by the searching power of the camera.

Marceline Day is with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Calif.

Evelyn Brent will receive letters sent to the Paramount—Famous Lasky studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood, Calif. Try Lila Lee there, too. I have no other address for her. She lives on a ranch near Los Angeles with her husband, James Kirkwood, and occasionally steps forth from her retirement to play in a stage production in Los Angeles.

Lillian Gish is with United Artists, 7200 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

A former Nebraskan, Harold Lloyd, is said to be the highest salaried star in motion pictures. His pictures bring him in somewhere around $1,000,000 a year—just a tidy little sum. Tom Mix and Gloria Swanson were drawing down around $17,000 a week for their services but Tom's contract with Fox expires in March, and Gloria thought she could do better heading her own company. Conway Tearle was the highest salaried leading man in motion pictures when he refused to work for less than $3,500 a week. He wasn't so particular as to the role but he insisted upon the salary if he did it. Conway has been having a little difficulty in persuading producers to employ him of late at that figure, and he's been doing a little kicking over the matter.

The "extras" would of course be the lowest salaried players, but I couldn't tell you what the lowest salaried star draws a week. Chances are they wouldn't announce it. A small contest winner for "Our Gang" series is to get $100 a week for three months for his services. The average leading man has been drawing from $1000 to $1500 a week, but the studios are endeavoring to make drastic cuts in the salaries of the players.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please tell me all about and the address of Dolores Del Rio and James Hall?

I would like to have the addresses of the following: Dorothy MacKaill, Lois Moran, May McAvoy, Mae Murray, Alberta Vaughn, Richard Arlen, Ben Lyon and Charles Rogers. Will all of these send pictures if asked to?

Hoping this escapes the W. B., I remain, Sincerely yours, PAT.
Crete, Neb.

Address Dolores Del Rio in care of Edwin Carewe Productions, 5360 Melrose Ave., Hollywood, Calif. Mr. Carewe discovered the charming Mexican player when he went to Mexico with Mary Akin to be married. Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor were married at the same time. The party were introduced to the del Rios through some Mexican officials, and the del Rios staged some elaborate social events in their honor.

At that time Dolores was a leading society matron in Mexico City with no intentions of becoming a motion picture player, but the director persuaded her to go to Hollywood for a film test, and the result is that they have both recently signed to make picture for United Artists.

Dolores was born in Durango Mexico twenty-two years ago. She lived on a ranch with her parents until she was five, and then went to Mexico City where her father was active in banking and other financial institutions. She received her education there in the convent of St. Joseph and later rounded it off with a trip to Europe.

Upon her return she met Jaime Martinez del Rio at a society function and five months after their meeting they were married. Senor del Rio was a wealthy bachelor and they traveled abroad for a year and a half before settling down to the social life in Mexico City, where they owned over a million acres of land known as "Cruces" rancho.

Dolores first picture was "Joanna" in which Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall starred. She made a hit and was later loaned to Universal where she co-starred with Edward Everett Horton in "The Whole Town's Talking." Later she played the leading lady in a Fox film titled "What Price Glory," which brought her to the heights in the motion picture world.

Her latest picture is the title role in "Ramona," from Helen Hunt Jackson's famous novel.

James Hall was playing in musical comedy on Broadway when Jess Lasky saw him and offered him a motion picture contract. His first work was opposite Bebe Daniels in "The Campus Flirt," and he made so good that he was immediately chosen ot play the leading role with Pola Negri in "Hotel Imperial." Two good "breaks" right off the bat!

But Mr. Hall was no novice at acting. He played leads for three years in such stage productions as "Merry, Merry," "Passing Shows" and "Poppy" with Madge Kennedy. He was appearing in "The Matinee Girl" when signed by Paramount.

Hall was born in Dallas, Texas, October 22, 1900, and received his education there. He is five feet eleven inches tall, weighs 156 pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes.

He's fond of all outdoor sports, particularly horseback riding and tennis.

Address him at the Paramount-Famous-Lasky studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood, Calif. Charles Rogers and Richard Arlen get their mail there, too.

Lois Moran is sojourning on the Fox lot just now, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif. Dorothy MacKaill and Ben Lyon look for their letters at the First National Studio, Burbank, Calif.

Dear Movie Editor—Here I am again, but with many more questions than ever before.

I would like to know what has become of the following stars, and please give me their height, weight, age and color of hair and eyes: Malcolm McGregor, Mabel Normand, May Allison, Nita Naldi, Justine Johnson, Mae Busch, Corinne Griffith, and Billie Dove.

Doesn't Bessie Love play in pictures any more? I always thought she was such a cute actress.

How long has Clara Bow and Richard Dix played in pictures?

I have just heaps more questions to ask but I will try and wait until the next time I write.

Thanking you in advance, I remain MIMI.

Not bad at all. You are a very considerate young lady.

Malcolm hasn't disappeared for any length of time. You should see him soon, if you haven't already in "Buck Privates." He was born in 1897 with dark hair and eyes. He weighs 165 and is five feet eleven in height.

Mabel Normand also has dark hair and eyes. Her height is five feet three, and she weighs around 123. Mabel's around thirty-four. Just at present she's nursing a sore jaw where she had a tooth extracted. Shes' also had a spell of sickness and hasn't made many pictures, lately. You no doubt saw her in some of her Hal Roach short subjects.

May Allison was born in 1895 with golden hair and blue eyes. She is five feet five and tips the scales at 125. May is the wife of James Quirk, Editor of Photoplay Magazine.

Nita went to Europe and forgot to return. She's five feet eight—quite some tall baby—and weighs 125 when she lives the milky way. She's more buxom when she neglects her diet. She has dark hair and greenish eyes.

Alberta Vaughn has gone to Honolulu to make pictures, where she may be addressed in care of the Hawaiian Film Co. Mae Murray isn't working before the camera just now. You might try her at Beverly Hills. May McAvoy is with Warner Brothers, 5842 Sunset Blvd., Hollydwood, Calif.

Dear Sir: I have a list of movie addresses that I wish you would tell me. Here they are: Jackie Coogan, Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix, Mary Pickford, Mary Brian, Betty Compson, Tom Tyler, Jack Holt, Harold Lloyd, Ronald Colman, Vilma Banky, Harry Langdon, Milton Sills and Lon Chaney.

This is a lot, I know, but I have got my chance now so didn't think you would care. Thank you very much for the information. Yours truly, BOBBY.

You are going to be a very busy person by the time you get all of those letters written.

Indeed, I don't mind at all having you ask for information when you have the opportunity. Come as often as you like.

Jackie Coogan and Lon Chaney both turn out pictures on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, Culver City, Calif.

Tom Mix is with Fox Film Co., 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood at present, but Tom expects to go to South America to make pictures as soon as he completes his contracts with them.

You will find Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky on the United Artists lot, 7200 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. Milton Sills and Harry Langdon drive out to Burbank, Calif., and park before the First National studio.

Jack Holt and Betty Compson are both with Columbia Pictures, Hollywood, Calif., at present.

Tom Tyler is a F. B. O. player, 780 Gower St., Hollywood. Address Harold Lloyd in care of his own company, same city, and Mary Brian in care of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood.

Julanne has brown hair and gray eyes. She's five feet six and weighs 120. She gives 1900 as the year of her birth, and was seen recently in "Good Time Charlie."

Miss Busch married and only makes pictures occasionally. She is five feet five and weighs 125. Her hair is dark and her eyes gray. She hovers close to thirty.

Corinne Griffith will make "The Divine Lady" for First National next. She is thirty this year and has light brown hair and blue eyes. Corinne is five feet four and weighs 120.

Billie Dove continues to grind out features for First National. She is twenty-five and has brown hair and eyes. She's five feet five and weighs 115.

Bessie Love hasn't had many breathing spells between pictures in the last thirteen years. Didn't you see her in "Dress Parade?"

Richard Dix has been working before the camera since "The Christian." Time flies so, but it must be about seven years ago since that picture was first made.

Clara made her first picture in 1923, but the past two years have shot her skyward.

Dear Movie Editor—I'm a regular reader of your columns and have come to you for advice a number of times. I unusually see my questions answered so I don't write very often. I would like for you to tell me who plays the part of Phillip Hale in the picture, "Not for Publication." Didn't he also have a part in "Moulders of Men?" Please tell me all you can about him, and give me his address. Also the addresses of Clive Brook, Larry Kent, James Hall, Charles Rogers, Antonio Moreno, Renee Adoree, Viola Dana and Alberta Vaughn.

Hoping to see this letter in the Star soon, and thanking you for your trouble, I am AN OLD FAN.
Bladen, Nebr.

They evidently meant it when they said "Not For Publication," because I fail to find a cast for the picture.

Address Clive Brook, James Hall and Charles Rogers at the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood, Calif.

Larry Kent has a letter box at the First National Studio, Burbank, Calif. You should locate Antonio through the Hollywood Athletic club. Renee Adoree is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Calif., although at the present time she working on the Universal lot. Alberta Vaughn is in Honolulu, in care of the Hawaiian Film Co., Viola would get a letter sent to her at Hollywood. She is between pictures at present.

Screen Siftings

Wedding Bells Ring—Marriages seem to be the order of the day in Hollywood just at present. Ruth Stonehouse, a former screen star, was married in Tia Juana recently to Felix Hughes, a vocal instructor and brother of Rupert Hughes.

—and will Ring—Madge Bellamy, popular Fox player, stole a march on her friends when she slipped away to Tia Juana and married Logan Metcalf, a Los Angeles broker.

—and Ring—Adamae Vaughn, sister of Alberta Vaughn and a baby star of the 1927 variety, is to remarry her former husband, Albert Hindman in the near future. Mr. Hindman is a young business man of Los Angeles. They were divorced about a year ago.

—and Ring—Mary Astor has announced her engagement to Kenneth Hawks, production supervisor of the Fox Studio. The wedding will take place at Miss Astor's home in Hollywood, February 23.

Some more—Soon!—Virginia Lee Corbin's sister, Ruth Emily Corbin, will marry Richard Scott Thornton in June. Mr. Thornton is an insurance man of Los Angeles.

Washburns to part—Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Washburn, who were married in 1914 and have two children, have come to the parting of the ways. Mrs. Washburn is suing her husband for divorce, charging desertion and cruelty. She was formerly Mabel Forrest, a film actress.

Let it Grow!—"Get in style and let your hair grow," Anne Nichols advised the feminine stars of filmland at a meeting at the Paramount studio where her play, "Abie's Irish Rose" is taking screen form. Miss Nichols declared that in two years time bobbed hair will be a thing of the past. She says that women of the stage are already letting their hair grow long.

Role for Anna May Wong—Anna May Wong, the popular Chinese actress, is taking the part of an Oriental dancer in Ramon Novarro's latest feature, "China Bound." The story was written by Ben Ames Williams and much of the action of the picture takes place on a sailing vessel on the Pacific. Joan Crawford is the heroine, and Ernest Torrence, Frank Currier, Edward Connelly, Dan Wolheim and Duke Martin are prominent in the supporting cast.

"Inside" Dope—Speaking of the little intimacies concerning the stars, Clara Bow never wears silk lingerie. That's what the wardrobe girl at the Paramount studio says. Clara prefers the sheerest of Irish linen for her underwear.

A Tight Fit—A cloth of gold, which will be woven to her body, is the creation which Gilbert Clarke has designed for Gwen Lee when she makes her appearance at the Wampas Frolic and Ball as one of the Baby Stars of 1928. The designers at the various studios are vieing with each other to evolve startling styles for the big doings at which all filmdom will be present.

Marceline Day and Joan Crawford are candidates for the $1,000 prize which will be awarded the former Wampas Baby Star who has achieved the greatest triumphs since her election. The result will be determined by a radio listeners' vote. Eleanor Boardman won the trophy a few years ago. Marceline and Joan will appear in innovations conceived by Mr. Clarke.

Her Voice Wins—The voice has it again. Lois Wilson has never had any stage experience her entire professional career having been behind the camera, but Miss Wilson's pleasing voice has won her a role in a Vitaphone playlet which Warner Brothers will produce, called "Found." Sam Hardy will appear opposite her in the Vitaphone feature.

Doug Jr. Climbing—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. is progressing upward in his father's direction at a rapid pace. He has had several noteworthy roles in pictures during the past few years and now has been signed for the leading role in the Tiffany-Stahl feature, "Powers." The picture is a screen version of the novel by the same name and will be produced by Reginald Barker as one of the most important pictures of the coming year. Jobyna Ralston, former leading lady to Harold Lloyd in his comedies, will play opposite Doug Jr. in "Power."

Again, But Different—The eternal triangle, but with a little different treatment, is the theme of "The Body Punch," which Jack Dougherty and Virginia Brown Faire will make for Universal. It's an original story written by Harry O. Hoyt. Leigh Jason, a newly signed director, has been assigned the task of bringing the story to the screen.

Reward for Ring—Dolores del Rio is offering a reward of $1,000 for the return of a ring valued at between $12,000 and $15,000 which she lost on her way home from a shopping tour. The ring was given to her by her father and was made up of a large emerald surrounded by twenty diamonds.

It's Dick—That's Richard Barthelmess that you see running around the First National lot with a coonskin cap and a squirrel rifle over his arm. He's taking the part of "Chad" a mountain boy in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." Molly O'Day is the leading lady and other new additions to the cast are Claude Gillingwater, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Martha Mattox.

What's In A Name?—Numerology had nothing to do with Kathryn McGuire's name becoming Kathryn Landy—she married a publicity man, George Landy—but it seems to have been a lucky change at that Kathryn has been assigned the chief supporting feminine roule in Colleen Moore's new picture, "Lilac Time." She will take the part of Gary Cooper's fiance. She also played the role of Colleen's chum in "Naughty But Nice," as Kathryn McGuire. Kathryn was designated by James Montgomery Flagg some months ago as "the most beautiful blonde in Hollywood."

Reel Stuff—The snow clad mountains of California are doubling for the Yukon for the scenes in "The Michigan Kid," the colorful novel by Rex Beach which is taking screen form under the direction of Irvin Willat. Renee Adoree and Conrad Nagel play the principal roles in the picture.

More Work—Ena Gregory has been as busy as a bee since she changed her name to Marian Douglas. She has now been signed to play opposite Ken Maynard in his next First National release, "Palomino." It's her fourth featured role since she changed her name three or four months ago.

Star's Children Star—Cecil B. De Mille's new picture, "The Godless Girl" will give fans an opportunity to see what the children of their favorites are like. Neely Edwards' daughter, Marcella; Carter De Haven's two children, Carter and Marjorie and Edward Peil's son, Edward, Jr. are all taking part in the picture. Besides that, several former juvenile stars will make a re-appearance in the picture, Mary Jane Irving, Buddy Messnger, Peaches Jackson, Pat and Micky Moore and May Giraci. Fans will remember most of them from the days of the Fox Kiddie Reels.

Profitable Discovery—Edwin Carewe is patting himself on the back these days for discovering Dolores del Rio. He has just signed a contract with Joseph M. Schenck, head of United Artists Corporation whereby Miss del Rio will make a series of seven to ten big productions for that company, to be produced and directed by Mr. Carewe. It is estimated that the joint profits during the life of the contract will total nearly $5,000,000.

The first story will be Konrad Bercivici's "The Bear Tamer's Daughter." Miss del Rio's role will be very dramatic and of the gypsy type.

From a Local Paper:
MAN PREFERING LINCOLN BLONDE WRITES TO HEDGE

"Blondes preferred."
Mayor Hedge Thursday "got the biggest kick" he has had since becoming chief executive of the city. It came in the form of a letter from an ex-marine, World war veteran who would like to become acquainted with a young lady resident of Lincoln, with matrimonial intentions.
The letter says the writer is a young man 34 years old seeking a young respectable lady friend to correspond with, "and who may consider marriage in due time.
"I am asking your aid as I prefer a Lincoln girl; blonde preferred, but why be particular as long as I meet a real one-man lady?"
Mayor Hedge said the name and address of the writer would be supplied upon request.

Lorelei says— "It's sweet for a man to kiss your hand, but a string of pearls lasts forever." She's the girl nobody no's. — The way she gets her "education" will convulse you with laughter!

If any fresh demonstration of the baton talents and musical authority of Ossip Gabrilowitsch had been needed, it was given recently in New York when he conducted the New York Symphony orchestra in two concerts as its guest. He gave readings that were cerebrally searching, technically brilliant and tinged with the clarified emotion of high musical nature. No striving after meretricious effects, no arbitrary imposition of personal idiosyncrasies marked any of the Gabrilowitsch interpretations. He is an artist to his finger tips as he proves literally when he plays the piano. He lives his music and the passing season finds him ever a more profound student and reverential disciple of the best examples of tonal art. This country may well be pleased that such a significant practitioner as Gabrilowitsch elects to live and work among us, and his own particular field of activity, the city of Detroit, has especial reason to feel proud. He has placed its orchestra on an artistic basis that under his direction should, in the end, give it a place comparable to that occupied by the older symphonic organizations.

A good many years ago, Whitney Tew, now teaching voice in New York, wrote the libretto of a music drama called "The Three Musketeers." This libretto was set to music by Reginald Sommerville, English composer and was presented with success in 1902 in Great Britain. Mr. Tew himself singing and acting. Mr. Tew believes that the music drama is to be revived, since he has received a request from Mr. Sommerville for the book.

Some serious-minded reviewers like to harp on the fact that nowadays many people go to concerts merely to hear the performers rather than to hear music. It was no different however, in the olden days. The books on musical history teem with stories of the public adoration of artists. Handel, Mozart, Weber, Lizst, Spohr, Hayden, were a few of the famous composers so patronized. It is not well always to decry the importance of the executant. Were it not for his performing powers and attractions of personality much excellent music would not attract an audience and would certainly fail to deliver its significant message to its listeners. A truce to the virtuous belitting of the tonal purveyors who transmit great music. It does no good if it gathers dust on the shelves. It does no good either, if it is poorly played or sung.

Cadman is fortunate in having his opera, "The Witch of Salem," taken on a tour by the Chicago Civic Opera company with no lesser artist in the leading role than Edith Mason. This opera, as will be recalled, was produced for the first time anywhere by the Chicago last year and some of the beautiful melodies, "stopped the show" on more than one occasion. It was said by many at the time that it was certainly the best American opera written to date. It will be given by the company on its long tour starting January 30, in Boston and going all the way to the Pacific coast and ending in Minneapolis on April 2.

Radio Digest

Adjust the Bearings.

When variable condensers are difficult to turn, adjustment may be made to the bearings or the friction ring, but under no condition apply oil to the working parts.

To Avoid Microphonic Noises.

It is very important that the grid condenser be mounted securely in the set. When mounted in a flimsy way, the familiar microphonic howl will result, due to the constant vibration of the grid leak.

Serviceable Brush for Cleaning Set.

An ordinary paint or typewriter brush is the best accessory for the receiver. With it, variable condensers and other parts of the set may be kept clean, checking the accumulation of dust in sensitive spots.

Placement of the Loudspeaker.

When a hum begins as the detector is burned at normal five volts, place the loudspeaker as far from the receiver as possible, so that vibrations cannot set the elements of the tubes ajar. Separate the "B" eliminator and "A" battery leads.

Test for Battery Polarity.

The use of a glass of water with just a trace of salt or vinegar to make the solution a fair conductor of electricity is one way of making a simple test for polarity. When the leads are immersed in the water, bubbles will be seen to form on one of them, which is the positive.

Tune Carefully to Check Interference.

Considerable cross-talk and interference can be eliminated if a little more care is used in tuning a receiver. A radio set is an exceedingly delicate proposition. Whether the reception is good or bad depends on the adjustment of the dials when the station is brought in. Most people tune their receiving sets without trying to get an exact adjustment of the dials.

Location for New Receiver.

When looking for a place to install a receiver in the home, the distance to a satisfactory ground connection must be considered as well as the leadin of the aerial. The latter is the more important consideration. It is usually advisable to bring the lead-in through a window. If this is done, the set should be mounted nearby, due consideration being given to the fact that the window may be left open. If the set is to use a socket antenna device, it should be mounted near the outlet or socket to which the device is to be connected.

For the Notebook.

Dry batteries cannot be recharged

Amplifier tubes will not last long if the filament is burned too brightly.

Low ratio trasformers have more turns on the primary than the high ratio type.

Leakage of an antenna will surely occur if the wire lead-in touches foliage or buildings.

The quickest way to destroy a dry battery is to subject it to excessive heat which causes a drying out of the many small cells.

Ordinary paper is not suitable for the cone speaker. This unit requires a special paper with a special cement to hold the ends together. Glue should not be used.

Radiograms.

Johanna Grosse, organist of station WLW, claims to have memorized 8,000 tunes.

It costs $600 per hour to broadcast from WEAF in New York, and the same price from WJZ.

The number of licenses for radio receiving stations in Switzerland has increased to more than 61,600.

France is planning Governmental control of wireless broadcasting with three big, national sending stations and 18 smaller regional ones.

Tristan da Cunha, the world's loneliest spot, is to be linked with the civilized world by radio. There are only 150 inhabitants on the tiny spot in the South Atlantic.

Passenger trains operating between Moscow and Leningrad in Russia in the future will be equipped with radio telephones. It will then be possible for a passenger on such a train to call any telephone device in either city and talk with a subscriber.

Grid leaks permit excess electrons to escape, hence prevent detector tube blocking.

Several new students have registered for the second semseter during the past week.

Thirteen New Polling Places Added In The City.

When Lincoln goes to vote in the coming primaries many of the electors in thirteen of the precincts will have to go to a new polling place. Increase in the population in these precincts has made a division necessary. In most instances the division has been as near the center as possible and with a view to expediting voting as well as counting the ballots after the polls close. The wards of the city are shown by the black lines in the illustration, and the precincts by the broken lines.

Fifth ward D; now D-1 and D-2.
Fifth ward E; now E-1 and E-2.
Sixth ward E-2; now E-2 and E-3.
Seventh ward B; now B-1 and B-2.
Seventh ward C; now C-1 and C-2.
Seventh ward D; now D-1 and D-2.

Slight changes have been made in the boundaries of these precincts. The new lines are shown plainly in the cut. The boundaries of Seventh ward E also should be noted by voters in that section of the city.

Ninth ward D; now D-1 and D-2.
Ninth ward E; now E-2 and E-3.
Tenth ward B; now Tenth ward B and Tenth ward C.

What was previously Tenth ward C will now be Tenth ward D and Tenth ward E.

The eleventh ward, University Place had three polling places. Under the change there are five. They are A, B, C, D and E. The dividing lines are shown.

The twelfth ward is in Bethany and is unchanged, except for designation, the precincts now becoming A and B instead of being designated by numerals.

Electors who failed to vote at either of the last two elections must register at the city hall, if they expect to cast their ballots in the primary. February 7, 8 and 9 has been fixed as the time when a drive will be made for registration in University Place.
